ARMOR PLANT COSTLY.

Report of Naval Board Made to Secretary Long.

PRICE OF PLATE TO BE HIGH.

The Document Shows That the Government Can't Make Armor Within the Limit Allowed by Congress to Private Firms—Data of the Experts.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The naval board appointed by authority of congress to ascertain the cost of an armor plant, has made its report through Commodore Howell to Secretary Long. The cost of a plant suitable for the making of naval armor at the rate of about 6,000 tons per annum, which is fully equal to the capacity of both of the existing private plants, is set down as about $3,500,000.

Secretary Long will now proceed immediately to take the next step necessary to carry out the wish of congress, namely, invite proposals by advertisement for building such a plant as that designed for the United States government.

It is expected that congress will be advised also of the offers made by both the existing armor making concerns to sell out to the government, and also of other large interests to turn over plants which, while not at all like the specifications of the board, will permit of alteration into effective plants. All of this data, it is expected, will be very valuable to congress in treating the whole armor question, but the report of the board, which may be strengthened by an endorsement from Secretary Long, will make it quite evident that the government cannot undertake to make its own armor at the cost named as the limit of price to be paid to private firms in the last naval appropriation bill.

Summing up the practicability, necessities, advantages and disadvantages of the proposed factory, the report says:

First—An armor factory comprises essentially a collection of special furnaces, heavy machine tools and appliances that are not needed in any other class of work, and a class of labor specially skilled in the business.

Second—A government armor factory not connected with an establishment engaged in other branches of the steel industry would depend for its success and economic administration upon a constant demand for an output nearly approaching its full capacity.

Third—if the government should establish an armor factory the efficient and economic maintenance or working of that factory would necessarily depend upon a constant yearly appropriation for ships to be provided with armor, because the armor produced at any time must be specially designed and fitted to those ships. Any failure to appropriate for those ships in any one year would require the cessation of work and the laying off, indefinitely, of the skilled experts and laborers that had been trained to this industry. A resumption of work at a later period would require the training, at a considerable expense, of a new set of men. In the meantime, the progress of the art would perhaps have been such that difficult and radical changes would be required which under continuous working might have been gradually and easily made.

Following are estimates for the cost, exclusive of the land, of a plant capable of making and furnishing ready for the installment on board ship of 6,000 tons per year of nickel steel, facehardened, reforgered armor.

Five per cent has been allowed for erecting and engineering expenses, and it is thought that 5 per cent additional allowance would cover all contingencies under the worst conditions that may be encountered as to site.

The estimates are as follows:

Name of department.	Estimates
Open hearth department.	$ 541,918
Forging and cementing shop.	1,558,237
Bending and tempering shop.	446,038
Machine shop.	600,651
Erecting shop.	94,461
Boiler shop.	119,574
Power plant.	134,658
Blacksmith shop.	32,411
Locomotive shop.	7,219
Carpenter shop.	8,686
Office building.	15,000
Chemical laboratory.	25,000
Physical laboratory.	33,000
Railroad tracks and equipment.	86,642
Latrines.	11,112
Water supply, sewerage, etc.	33,297
Total.	$3,747,912

In view of many advantages to accrue and notwithstanding the greater first cost of the establishment the board recommends that the government armor factory includes a plant for the production of open hearth steel ingots. On the subject of sites the board says:

The board in its instructions was not charged with the selection of a site or location for the armor factory. It, however, appends to this report a list of places recommended to the board as sites and showing also the names of the persons so recommending them.

The board says already new processes are coming into vogue and says:

"Any change in method that improves the ballistic properties of armor plate has a very serious bearing upon the science of naval architecture, but it is evident that in any factory which may be established it must be held in contemplation that changes will have to be made therein from time to time to keep it up to date in its processes and products."

A proving ground is also recommended.

GREAT RUSH TO KLONDIKE.

Consul Smith Says Canada Is Scheming to Get the Benefit.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Consul Smith, at Victoria, in his report to the state department, discusses the subject of the Klondike gold fields. The advices received at Victoria, he says, indicate that the rush in '49 to California and later to South Africa will be eclipsed by the goldseekers headed for the Yukon in the early months of 1898. Agents from England have been at Victoria making arrangements for 3,000, 4,000 goldseekers.

Merchants there have secured great supplies of outfit goods and the transportation companies have made arrangements sufficient to make daily lines between that port and St. Michaels, Dyea, Skagway and Fort Wrangle.

The Canadian authorities have made every possible arrangement for an all-Canadian route to the gold fields and are trying to make it to the interest of miners to purchase their outfits in Canada. This is to be done through tariff laws.

RURAL FREE DELIVERY.

Heath Makes a Suggestion to Increase Its Efficiency.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Acting Postmaster General Perry S. Heath has issued a circular regarding the rural postal free delivery, in which he says:

"The ultimate success of the experiment of free delivery of mail, which is now being tried by direction of congress in 50 rural districts of the United States, will depend largely upon the promptness with which the carriers can make their deliveries to the patrons on their routes. This will be greatly facilitated if those desiring to take advantage of rural free delivery will erect suitable boxes by the roadside in which carriers may deposit mails as they pass, and from which they may collect the mails intended for transmission."

ALMOST A REBELLION.

Czechs Rioting in Bohemia, as a Sequel to the Outrages of Germans In Other Parts of Austria—Rioters Killed—Three Hundred Germans Hurt.

PRAGUE, Dec. 2.—The rioting here has assumed a very grave phase. The town streets are crowded with soldiers, but their presence has had little effect toward intimidating the rioters.

The windows of the German theater, German schools, restaurants, residences and newspaper offices were broken. The furniture of a well-known German cafe was piled up in the street and set on fire.

A mob attempted to storm a cartridge factory at Zizhkov, a suburb of Prague on the other side of the Moldau. The troops stationed at the factory poured a volley into the crowd. It is known that at least two persons were killed outright, and it is feared that others were killed or wounded. The same body of rioters set fire to a house at Zizhkov, but the flames were soon quenched. In various other parts of the city and the suburbs windows were smashed and German sign boards demolished. It is said that the mob was incited by articles in the Czech newspapers and by a false report that the German students had organized an attack on the Czech national theater.

This rioting is due to the feeling between the Hungarians and Germans in Austria-Hungary. The rioting in the Austrian congress, at Vienna, was also due to the same cause.

As a result of the riots and disorders, the authorities have proclaimed the city under martial law. The chief of police, who is a Czech, was discovered encouraging rioters and has been suspended from office. It is known that the number of injured Germans reaches 300. They are being cared for at the various hospitals.

The disturbances have amounted almost to a rebellion. Thousands of Czech miners streamed into Prague from the surrounding villages to assist the rioters.

AUSTRIA'S CRISIS.

Czechs May Force the New Ministry to Resign, Owing to Their Demands.

VIENNA, Dec. 2.—The prospects for the new ministry are ominous. The assignments of portfolios have been received on all sides with frigid reserve, and, although the dismissal of Count Badeni has allayed the spirit of rebellion in Vienna and the German towns, anarchy has broken out in the Slav and Czechish towns and provinces.

It looks as though Baron Hautsch would have as great difficulties to face in the demands of the Czechs and Socialists as Count Badeni had in the demands of the Germans. Seeing the success that mob influence has had in Vienna in bringing about the downfall of Count Badeni, the Czechs are trying by the same influence to bring pressure to bear upon the new cabinet.

Justice Field's Retired.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Justice Field's retirement from the supreme court, of which he gave official notice to the president last April, took place yesterday. There was no formality attendant upon it, the justice not being present in the courtroom. Under the law he will draw full salary until his death.

JUDGE DAY TO RETIRE.

Will Resume His Law Practice In Canton.

DEEMS IT DUE TO HIS FAMILY.

His Resources Only Moderate—Feels He Cannot Give His Energies to the Government For Pay Not Sufficient to Support His Family In Washington.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—A special to The Times-Herald from Washington says: Judge Day, now assistant secretary of state, will soon retire from public life to resume the practice of law at Canton, O. This statement is made on authority.

Judge Day declined the attorney generalship, nor does he expect to be made secretary of state if Mr. Sherman retires. Judge Day wishes no further public employment. His only desire is to return to his law office and devote himself to the acquirement of financial independence.

When he left Canton his law practice was worth nearly $20,000 a year, and as he has a large family and only moderate resources, he deems it his duty to return to his work instead of giving his energies to the government for a compensation not sufficient to pay his family expenses in Washington.

Judge Day's determination to retire is the cause of much regret to the president and his associates.

TOOK POISON IN FOOD.

Two Hundred and Fifty Patients at Gallipoli Hospital Ill.

GALLIPOLIS, Dec. 2.—Two hundred and fifty patients at the Epileptic hospital were poisoned by toxic poison, it is presumed. Dr. Rutter and his corps of physicians succeeded only after a desperate fight in checking the outbreak without a fatality. As it is some of the patients are still in a critical condition, Dr. Rutter is not apprehensive, however, believing he will be able to avert the evils of the poisoning.

The presumption among the hospital physicians is that the infection came from some articles of food eaten by patients, and the bacteriological department is making a rigid analysis of the food cooked during the past few days. Some think a deleterious drug was placed in some of the food and that, with the disruption extant at the institution over the wholesale discharge of employees, has put the institution in the throes of great excitement.

The poisoning is similar to that which happens occasionally from eating icecream that has bred toxic poison.

Secret Indictment Against a Broker.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 2.—A secret indictment has been returned by the grand jury against L. L. Becker, an investment banker and broker of Minneapolis. He is accused of swindling his cousin, John C. Gleim, of this city, out of $2,700 with a bad check.

Senator Hanna Worse.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 2.—Senator Hanna's physician announces that the senator is worse. He is suffering with severe headache and will have to delay his proposed trip to Washington for ten days.

Sold Under the Hammer.

DETROIT, Dec. 2.—The Detroit chamber of commerce has been sold under the hammer, in default of payment of interest on the first mortgage on the building, held by the New York Life Insurance company. The purchasers are Leopold S. Fechheimer of Cincinnati and William H. Winslow and Francis A. Winslow of Chicago. The purchase price is $422,650.

Occupied by the English.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 2.—It is rumored here that Anglo-Egyptian forces have occupied Metemmehon, on the Nile, the main Dervish position between Berber, the headquarters of the expeditionary force, and Omdurman, near Khartoum, the stronghold of the Dervishes.

THE CAR COUPLER LAW.

Arguments Made For and Against a Long Extension.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The interstate commerce commission has heard arguments on the application to extend the time in which the car coupler law should go into effect. It is to become a law Jan. 1. The railroads want it extended five years. President Cowan of the B. & O. said it would cost from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 for the railroads to comply with the law. This money must be earned. If the commission declined an extension the roads would be absolutely unable to equip their cars out of their own resources. The cost, he said, must come out of the wages of the employees if the roads were to be driven beyond their financial ability.

P. H. Morrissey, representing the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, the Railroad Conductors' association, the Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and the Association of Railroad Telegraphers, followed Mr. Cowan with a presentation of the attitude of the railroad employees toward the solicited extension.

The association for which he appeared, he said, were a unit in protesting against any such unreasonable extension as had been proposed. Five years, he said, would render the purpose of the law nugatory.

During the past five years 2,000 railroad men have been killed annually and between 20,000 and 25,000 injured. Of these casualties 60 per cent were directly attributable to the two evils this law was designed to correct.

"I speak in no defiant spirit," said he, "but I want to say that when the question of a reduction of wages is presented to us we will meet it. If the alternative of reduction of wages or the maiming and death of its members were presented to the organizations which I represent, I do not hesitate to say that they would prefer to go out and equip the roads themselves."

He called attention to the great financial losses the beneficial companies of the associations had sustained. In death and disability claims $2,000,000 had been paid out during the past five years, enough to completely equip a road like the Louisville and Nashville. When pressed by Chairman Morrison, Mr. Morrissey replied that the railroad employees agreed that the maximum extension must not exceed a year.

Mr. Loomis of the New York Central, whose road has complied fully, asked for the extension on the ground that the commission could not contemplate such an interruption of traffic as must follow the inability of his and other terminal roads to haul unequipped cars.

RUSSIA AROUSED.

Reported to Intend to Oppose Germany In China.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—It is reported here in well informed circles that the view of the Russian government had undergone a change as to the situation at Kiao-Chau bay.

Seeing the large force that Germany is assembling there Russia is inclined, with France, to oppose German action.

A special dispatch from Shanghai says that nine men have been arrested for assisting in the murder of German missionaries.

It is currently reported there that France, Germany and Russia have entered into a compact for acquisition of Chinese territory. Germany taking Shan Tung, Russia taking Korea and France taking Fo-Kien and Formosa.

The movements of the British and Japanese fleets are supposed to indicate suspicion as to the conduct of the other powers. Japan objects to a German occupation of Kiao-Chau until China has paid the war indemnity.

It is understood at Shanghai that China will propose to refer the whole matter to the powers for arbitration.

Cold in the Northwest.

St. PAUL, Dec. 2.—Of the northwestern stations of the government weather bureau the warmest one last night was that at Dbluth, which recorded zero. At the same hour it was 4 below in St. Paul, 6 below in Huron, 10 below at Winnipeg, 12 below at Bismarck, Batafleld and Minnedosa, 18 below at Williston, 20 below at Medicine Hat and 30 below at Havre.

Henry George Married.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Henry George was married here this morning to Miss Marcella Hitch, at the residence of the bride's father, Captain E. V. Hitch. The wedded couple left for the east soon after. Miss Elinore Hitch was the maid of honor and Mr. Crawford of New York the best man. Mr. George's mother and sister and a few relatives of the Hitch family were the only guests.

Rooney Imprisoned For 20 Years.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 2.—William Rooney has been convicted of murder in the second degree and sentenced to 20 years in the eastern penitentiary for instantly killing Alphonse Picard and attempting to kill Miss Verona Selheim, whom he shot three times on Aug. 23 last on the street. Picard and Rooney were rivals for the affections of the girl. The defense was intoxication.

ROONEY IMPRISONED FOR 20 YEARS.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 2.—William Rooney has been convicted of murder in the second degree and sentenced to 20 years in the eastern penitentiary for instantly killing Alphonse Picard and attempting to kill Miss Verona Selheim, whom he shot three times on Aug. 23 last on the street. Picard and Rooney were rivals for the affections of the girl. The defense was intoxication.

ARRESTED THE MOTHER

Because She Neglected Her Little Children.

AN ECHO OF TWO YEARS AGO

The Township Trustees Looked After the Family at That Time, and Now That the Same Condition is Found Again They Have Gone After the Party.

Yesterday afternoon Chief Johnson arrested Mrs. Ladshaw at her home in Broadway for drunkenness and neglect of children, and the woman spent the night in jail.

The story dates back almost two years ago, when one cold winter morning the township trustees were called to Lyth's sewer pipe works to care for a destitute family. At that time they found Mrs. Ladshaw under the influence of liquor, and her two children suffering from hunger. The entire family were sent to the infirmary, where they remained but a few days and then moved to Pennsylvania, and the trustees lost track of them.

About 10 days ago Trustee Albright received a call from Broadway, and when he arrived was surprised to find Mrs. Ladshaw very much under the influence, and money was scattered over the floor, while her children, aged six and eight years, were again entirely neglected. They were cared for, and the woman was notified to behave herself or she would be arrested.

The woman did well until yesterday when she got on a big drunk, and the police took a hand in the matter and arrested her. The trustees immediately placed the children in the care of a woman, and will see that they are provided for until the case is settled.

The father of the children lives in Negley, but he and his wife have been separated for a number of years. She is well able to care for the children, and when sober provides them with a very comfortable home, but her appetite for strong drink is the cause of the trouble. She is well aware of her weakness, and in a business house Tuesday remarked to the proprietor, "I am not a bad woman, only occasionally I get on a big drunk."

At the hearing this morning the woman was fined $14.60.

BREAD UPON THE WATERS.

How Salem Looks Upon Liverpool's Enterprise.

The Salem News heard that we are to have a steel mill and immediately gave this to the world:

"Liverpool citizens are casting their bread upon the waters as it were. It will all come back with good interest. There is a town on the Ohio river of which every citizen of Columbiana county may justly feel proud. Passing through a long season of business depression, Liverpool emerges into the sunlight of Republican prosperity and goes to work, establishing two new pottery plants, a new national bank and now a sheet mill and steel plant, securing a large addition to her population. This increase of population will help to bear the burdens of taxation necessary to give Liverpool all those modern improvements that make a city inviting. Go on, Liverpool: we have nothing in the form of envy, but only admiration for the push, the energy and the pluck which characterize the action of the business men of the Ceramic City. Would that there were more of it in every town!"

POOR MERCER.

They Now Charge Him With Conducting a Dancing Academy.

The Cleveland Leader is evidently not in possession of the facts concerning Winnie Mercer's winter. It says:

"Winnie Mercer, the Washington twirler, is not spending the winter in idleness. Instead, the graceful dispenser of curves and shoots is conducting a dancing academy at his home in East Liverpool. Winnie is a great favorite with the fair sex, and many an Ohio maiden owes her knowledge of the mazy waltz to the Bean Brummel of base ball."

TO THE PUBLIC.

Owing to improvements now being made at the First National Bank building, the banking business will be transacted in the rear room, entrance off alleyway, it being found necessary to close the front doors, in order to expedite said improvements.

MANY CHINESE READ THE BIBLE.

Important Question Asked of Students

W's Concerning Noah.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—The American Bible society has received from its correspondent in Shanghai an account of the recent examinations for the master's degree among students. In all former years the questions asked of the candidates have been on literary lines and have been limited to the literature of China since the days of Confucius. This year the imperial edict directed that the questions to be asked and answered should relate to matters of importance at the present time. The following surprising question was read by 10,000 students in the examination halls:

"What do you know of the re-peopling of the earth by Noah and his family after the flood?"

The Pekin examination board, which framed this question, had been reading the Old Testament, which is now recommended as a text book and for which there is an increased demand. The statesmen of China, her scholars and her students are said to be studying the Bible because it is the classic of Christian countries. They have to be come acquainted with western religion, western science, western political economy, western philosophy, and they read the Bible among the other books current in western countries.

PROTESTANT MISSIONS.

Statistics Showing Extent of the Work, Prepared by Rev. Dr. Strong.

BOSTON, Dec. 2.—Rev. Dr. E. E. Strong of The Missionary Herald has compiled statistics of Protestant missions in this and other lands for the past year as follows:

The number of stations of the American board is, outstations, 1,126; American laborers, 543; native laborers, 2,956; churches, 470; communicants, 44,606; number added last year, 3,914; schools of all grades, 1,181; total number under instruction, 54,615; native contributions for all purposes, $113,039; cost of missions, $636,299.

The missionary societies of the United States, Canada, Great Britain, continental Europe, Asia, Africa and Australia, number 249, with 4,694 stations and 15,200 outstations.

There are 11,659 missionaries, 64,299 native laborers and 1,121,639 communicants.

There are 913,478 persons under instruction and the income in all these countries is $12,988,687.

weighing about 190 pounds. Ryan tipped the beam at 175 pounds, and, like his opponent, was in the best of condition.

Ruhlin at the outset was awkward and Ryan in point of cleverness showed considerable superiority. The Australian, realizing his disadvantage, fought for the body, and in the first eight rounds landed with plenty of force on the body. For a time this weakened Ruhlin, but he gained courage and finally became stronger and captured the day. His blows in the last two rounds were hard and Ryan was groggy and could hardly have stood the round longer.

On every side Ryan was given praise for his gameness and brilliancy, while Ruhlin was held as a husky heavyweight, with little chance of ever becoming a champion.

HELP FOR WHALERS.

HERD OF REINDEER TO BE DRIVEN TO POINT BARROW.

Plans of Captain Tuttle—Relief Ship Bear Selected For the Work—The Whalers May Be Safely Housed in the Government Relief Station.

The whole country is deeply interested just now in the fate of one Norwegian and seven American whaling ships, said to have been caught in the ice north and east of Point Barrow, with insufficient food to support them until they return to San Francisco, their home port.

The United States revenue service on the Pacific coast embraces a supervision of the whaling fleet in Bering sea and the Arctic ocean north of Bering strait in order to see that the laws prohibiting the distribution of firearms and "fire water" among the savages of Alaska and Siberia in the way of trade are carried out.

For this purpose the revenue cutters Bear and Corwin make yearly trips to the arctic seas, and their officers are naturally well informed concerning the conditions prevailing there, in the summer months at least. It was natural, therefore, that when it was decided to send relief to the imprisoned whalers the revenue marine should be called upon to perform the hazardous work, they being provided with suitable vessels as well as experienced officers.

The condition of the imprisoned whaling fleet is not so desperate as to warrant such a heroic effort to reach it.

If they are really in trouble—and many whaling captains as well as others more or less familiar with the history of the whaling industry in that part of the world doubt that fact—the arrival of a single sled, with one or two white men bearing the news that a relief ship with 100 barrels of pork and 100 barrels of ships' biscuit awaited the shipwrecked crews near Sledge island or Cape Nome would buoy them up and they could make the trip to the stores without very much trouble.

It is not a new thing by any means for whalers to get caught in the ice north and eastward of Point Barrow, and even long before there was a relief station anywhere upon that coast the men have escaped to the land and reached a place of safety at Cape Prince of Wales or Port Clarence, where they were picked up during the following summer by the incoming whalers or the steamers belonging to the revenue service. At one time there were about 30 whaling vessels caught in the ice pack above Point Barrow and the crews of all except two, who elected to stay by their ships and were never again heard from, made their escape safely over 40 miles of intervening ice and reached the northern coast of Alaska, where, scattering out, they managed to find sufficient sustenance until relieved later on. Most of the abandoned ships passed on into the great unknown, but two, I believe, remained somewhere in the track of the whalers and were picked up by them during the next season.

Captain Tuttle, who had considerable experience in the Arctic while in the revenue service, will command the Bear, and every effort will be made by him to get beyond Norton sound before the ice forms there, and he hopes to reach Sledge island, about 40 miles from Port Clarence, by the 15th of December. The revenue bureau has information that Norton sound does not freeze over until January, and in that case Captain Tuttle may arrive at his destination at the time fixed, but if he is calculating upon an open winter north because the winter in these lower latitudes has so far been very mild he is likely to be mistaken, for the whaling captains have found that the climatic conditions are reversed. A cold winter here indicates an open winter north and vice versa.

It is probable that any relief party from the Bear will find most of the beleaguered whalers at the relief station near Point Barrow, where there is a house designed by Commodore Melville, the veteran arctic traveler, and built by the United States government to be used as a refuge for shipwrecked mariners who might reach the northern coast of Alaska in need of stores and shelter. Three years' supplies were always maintained there, and three men were there, paid to take charge of the station. This was prior to 1896, but since then the relief station has been taken in charge by the owners of the vessels engaged in the whaling business in that part of the Arctic ocean.

The supply of stores has been maintained at this station ever since, and this year, it is said, there are 400 barrels of flour at the post of the North American Trading company, only 16 miles from Point Barrow. So that after all the icebound whalers may not be in such great distress as appeared probable when the news of their detention first reached this country.

But, be that as it may, they should have the benefit of the doubt, and the government can very well afford to make every effort to see that they have relief if necessary. Of course no one expected that sufficient provisions could be taken on sledges overland to feed 265 men for six months or that they could be brought back to a refuge station in a body. The only feasible thing to be done in this case seems to be to drive a herd of the tame reindeer that the government has introduced into Alaska to the refuge station at Point Barrow and furnish fresh meat "on the hoof" to those in need of it.

This is the plan proposed by the officers in charge of the relief expedition, but as the herd can only be moved slowly while in such great numbers it has been proposed to send 600 or 1,000 head. It would be well to send a sledge party on in advance with the information that fresh venison will be furnished by the government a little later on. —W. H. Gilder in New York Journal.

In Sokotra.

The population of the island is made up of several races. On the coast one finds a mongrel blend of Arabs and negroes. Among the mountains the villagers are Bedouin pure and simple, with chocolate colored skins and handsome features. But, taken as a whole, the inhabitants of Sokotra do not impress one favorably. They are extremely greedy, and "robbeah" is a word scarcely ever out of their mouths. The rupee has ousted the old Maria Theresa dollar from this island, as from other oriental countries, but the islanders are not yet accustomed to the use of the smaller Indian currency, and often look askance at the 2 anna pieces we offered them for milk or butter. Only once during our stay did we meet with any real generosity or hospitality, and that was from an alien, a merchant of Muscat.

Woe to the unhappy traveler whose money goes out in Sokotra, or to the still more hapless mariner cast upon these shores without any possessions. The sultan, it is true, receives £90 a year from the British government and is required by treaty to befriend Englishmen who may be wrecked on this coast, but the abominable treatment we received at the hands of this mean and avaricious ruler would not lead one to expect much in the way of generosity toward poor or penniless outcasts. When we wished to leave the island before the change of the monsoon had cut off all possibility of such a thing, the sultan prevented any boat from making a bargain with us, in order to force us to employ his own dhow, for the hire of which he demanded the outrageous sum of £120. We ultimately secured the wretched bungalow for £50, an extortionate price.—Longman's Magazine.

St. Andrew's by Wardrobe.

The tiny churchyard of St. Andrew's by Wardrobe has many associations. It is even Shakespearean. In his last will the poet left a house in the parish to his daughter, Susannah Hall, "situata, lying and being in Blackfriars, in London, near the Wardrobe." "But why Wardrobe?" will be asked by such as remember Betsy Trotwood's "Why Rookery?" In a palace built in the fourteenth century by Sir John Beauchamp, the same whose tomb in St. Paul's churchyard became the resort of the dinnerless, who believed it to be that of the good Duke Humphrey, Edward III deposited all the old court clothes. The exhibition was a sort of sartorial library, as somebody has remarked. Now its site over against the northeast corner of the church is covered by Wardrobe Chambers. In the churchyard lie two of "Vandyke's men," and his daughter was baptized there, so there are artistic as well as poetic associations. Indeed, Faithorn, the engraver, was buried there. An old epitaph is preserved in Maitland, but no trace of it is now to be found:

When God was pleased (the world unwilling yet)

Helias James to Nature paid his debt, And here repose: as he lived he dy'd. The saying in him strongly verified.

Such life, such death, then a long truth to tell, He lived a godly life and dy'd as well.

Helias James was evidently of those whose hand is subdued to what it works in.—Westminster Gazette.

Silas in New York.

A figure that was for a time familiar in up town streets has now appeared down town. It is that of a man in the garb of a countryman carrying an old fashioned valise, upon which an advertisement is painted. Up town he returned at intervals to the shore he came from, looked up at the sign over the door and then walked in, to start out again presently on another round.

Down town he carries two valises, a small, flat valise of the alligator mouth kind, upon the side of which is marked the name "Silas." The other, a big, square, glazed valise, bears the name and announcement of a down town hotel.

Silas, wearing clothes from way back, his trousers tucked in his boots, and a red bandanna around his neck, smooth faced and wearing spectacles, and with a look of profound innocence upon his countenance, wanders about through the busy streets in the lower part of the city. He attracts attention, and that is his business. Incidentally he adds one to the many odd, picturesque and interesting features of the city's varied show.—New York Sun.

The Cattle of Arbela.

Arbela, which gave its name to the third great battle between Alexander and Darius, is a town in the Turkish vilayet of Kurdistan, on the caravan route between Bagdad and Mosul, about 40 miles southeast of the latter city. The battle, however, was not really fought at Arbela, but at a place 30 miles distant, then called Gangamela, now Karmelis.

The farmer is supposed to be about as healthy as it is possible for a man to be. People smile at the idea that a farmer can ever be ill. His occupation is supposed to be an assurance of good health. The contrary is frequently the case. He is the most hard worked of men, and the hard-working man above all others needs to take care of his health. Frequently the farm is in a malarial district. The result is malarial troubles, liver complaint, rheumatism or neuralgia.

The best of all medicines for hard-working men and women is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It invigorates and purifies the blood, driving out the poisons that are responsible for malaria, and the acids that are responsible for rheumatism. It is the greatest of all blood-makers, flesh-builders and nerve tonics. It strengthens the muscles and vitalizes every organ. It brings sweet slumber at night and mental and physical activity during the day. It gives zest to the appetite and makes the digestion perfect. The man or woman who resorts to this wonderful medicine whenever the body is out of sorts will be able to do almost any amount of work without danger to the constitution. Thousands have testified to its marvelous merits. Medicine dealers sell it.

"Your 'Golden Medical Discovery' cured me of a severe case of poisoning," writes Mrs. Selia Ricca, of Coast, Santa Cruz Co., Cal. "Boils one after another would break out on my arms, and were very painful. I have tried loudly praised Sarsaparilla without any benefit whatever, and not until I took your 'Discovery' did I get well. That was two years ago, and I have not had a boil or sore of any kind since."

The wise mother looks after the health of every member of the family. In this she cannot have a better aid than a copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It contains 1008 pages and over 300 illustrations. It tells all about the home-treatment of ordinary diseases. It used to cost $1.50 a copy; now it is free. For a paper-covered copy send 25 cents to cover mailing only, or 35 cents for cloth binding. Address The World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

East Liverpool Extends a Hearty Welcome—Our Citizens Show Appreciation in Public Utterances.

Lack of appreciation is not a failing of our citizens, and the advent of the "little conqueror" was received with the same display of enthusiasm that has spread all over the Union. Coming like a ray of sunshine to every household, raising burdens that many backs have borne for years, is enough to awaken the public to the like of which has never before been heard in this locality. From every ward, from every street came the same report. Failure is an unknown quantity as far as the "little conqueror" is concerned, and success follows every footprint. Right here at home the triumphs have been many and have set our people talking about the wondrous workings. The following case in point should interest every reader, and it is only one among thousands:

Mr. W. F. Cochran, of Mulberry street, East End, says: "At intervals for thirty years I have had serious kidney and bladder trouble. I have suffered with all the various symptoms in their worst form. The agony I have gone through can hardly be described. Many nights I have rolled from one side to the other trying to find an easy position for my back. I could not move without having sharp twinges of pain and at times distressing. I have been run down that I could hardly help myself. Doctors have treated me and I have taken a power of stuff. I have given up all hope of being cured, having suffered so long and not finding anything that would give me relief more than a few days. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised as a never failing remedy, I got a box at the W. and W. Pharmacy. After taking half of

HELP FOR WHALERS.

HERD OF REINDEER TO BE DRIVEN TO POINT BARROW.

Plans of Captain Tuttle—Relief Ship Bear Selected For the Work—The Whalers May Be Safely Housed in the Government Relief Station.

The whole country is deeply interested just now in the fate of one Norwegian and seven American whaling ships, said to have been caught in the ice north and east of Point Barrow, with insufficient food to support them until they return to San Francisco, their home port.

The United States revenue service on the Pacific coast embraces a supervision of the whaling fleet in Bering sea and the Arctic ocean north of Bering strait in order to see that the laws prohibiting the distribution of firearms and "fire water" among the savages of Alaska and Siberia in the way of trade are carried out.

For this purpose the revenue cutters Bear and Corwin make yearly trips to the arctic seas, and their officers are naturally well informed concerning the conditions prevailing there, in the summer months at least. It was natural, therefore, that when it was decided to send relief to the imprisoned whalers the revenue marine should be called upon to perform the hazardous work, they being provided with suitable vessels as well as experienced officers.

The condition of the imprisoned whaling fleet is not so desperate as to warrant such a heroic effort to reach it.

If they are really in trouble—and many whaling captains as well as others more or less familiar with the history of the whaling industry in that part of the world doubt that fact—the arrival of a single sled, with one or two white men bearing the news that a relief ship with 100 barrels of pork and 100 barrels of ship's biscuit awaited the shipwrecked crews near Sledge island or Cape Nome would buoy them up and they could make the trip to the stores without very much trouble.

It is not a new thing by any means for whalers to get caught in the ice north and eastward of Point Barrow, and even long before there was a relief station anywhere upon that coast the men have escaped to the land and reached a place of safety at Cape Prince of Wales or Port Clarence, where they were picked up during the following summer by the incoming whalers or the steamers belonging to the revenue service.

At one time there were about 30 whaling vessels caught in the ice pack above Point Barrow and the crews of all except two, who elected to stay by their ships and were never again heard from, made their escape safely over 40 miles of intervening ice and reached the northern coast of Alaska, where, scattering out, they managed to find sufficient sustenance until relieved later on.

Most of the abandoned ships passed on into the great unknown, but two, I believe, remained somewhere in the track of the whalers and were picked up by them during the next season.

Captain Tuttle, who had considerable experience in the Arctic while in the revenue service, will command the Bear, and every effort will be made by him to get beyond Norton sound before the ice forms there, and he hopes to reach Sledge island, about 40 miles from Port Clarence, by the 15th of December. The revenue bureau has information that Norton sound does not freeze over until January, and in that case Captain Tuttle may arrive at his destination at the time fixed, but if he is calculating upon an open winter north because the winter in these lower latitudes has so far been very mild he is likely to be mistaken, for the whaling captains have found that the climatic conditions are reversed. A cold winter here indicates an open winter north and vice versa.

It is probable that any relief party from the Bear will find most of the beleaguered whalers at the relief station near Point Barrow, where there is a house designed by Commodore Melville, the veteran arctic traveler, and built by the United States government to be used as a refuge for shipwrecked mariners who might reach the northern coast of Alaska in need of stores and shelter. Three years' supplies were always maintained there, and three men were there, paid to take charge of the station. This was prior to 1896, but since then the relief station has been taken in charge by the owners of the vessels engaged in the whaling business in that part of the Arctic ocean.

The supply of stores has been maintained at this station ever since, and this year, it is said, there are 400 barrels of flour at the post of the North American Trading company, only 16 miles from Point Barrow. So that after all the icebound whalers may not be in such great distress as appeared probable when the news of their detention first reached this country.

But, be that as it may, they should have the benefit of the doubt, and the government can very well afford to make every effort to see that they have relief if necessary. Of course no one expected that sufficient provisions could be taken on sledges overland to feed 260 men for six months or that they could be brought back to a refuge station in a body. The only feasible thing to be done in this case seems to be to drive a herd of the tame reindeer that the government has introduced into Alaska to the refuge station at Point Barrow and furnish fresh meat "on the hoof" to those in need of it.

This is the plan proposed by the officers in charge of the relief expedition, but as the herd can only be moved slowly while in such great numbers it has been proposed to send 600 or 1,000 head. It would be well to send a sledge party on in advance with the information that fresh venison will be furnished by the government a little later on. —W. H. Gilder in New York Journal.

In Sokotra.

The population of the island is made up of several races. On the coast one finds a mongrel blend of Arabs and negroes. Among the mountains the villagers are Bedouin pure and simple, with chocolate colored skins and handsome features. But, taken as a whole, the inhabitants of Sokotra do not impress one favorably. They are extremely greedy, and "robbeah" is a word scarcely ever out of their mouths. The rupee has ousted the old Maria Theresa dollar from this island, as from other oriental countries, but the islanders are not yet accustomed to the use of the smaller Indian currency, and often look askance at the 2 anna pieces we offered them for milk or butter. Only once during our stay did we meet with any real generosity or hospitality, and that was from an alien, a merchant of Muscat.

Woe to the unhappy traveler whose money gave out in Sokotra, or to the still more hapless mariner cast upon these shores without any possessions. The sultan, it is true, receives £90 a year from the British government and is required by treaty to befriend Englishmen who may be wrecked on this coast, but the abominable treatment we received at the hands of this mean and avaricious ruler would not lead one to expect much in the way of generosity toward poor or penniless outcasts. When we wished to leave the island before the change of the monsoon had cut off all possibility of such a thing, the sultan prevented any boat from making a bargain with us, in order to force us to employ his own dhow, for the hire of which he demanded the outrageous sum of £120. We ultimately secured the wretched bungalow for £50, an extortionate price.—Longman's Magazine.

St. Andrew's by Wardrobe.

The tiny churchyard of St. Andrew's by Wardrobe has many associations. It is even Shakespearean. In his last will the poet left a house in the parish to his daughter, Susannah Hall, "situate, lying and being in Blackfriars, in London, near the Wardrobe." "But why Wardrobe?" will be asked by such as remember Betsy Trotwood's "Why Rookery?" In a palace built in the fourteenth century by Sir John Beauchamp, the same whose tomb in St. Paul's churchyard became the resort of the dinnerless, who believed it to be that of the good Duke Humphrey, Edward III deposited all the old court clothes. The exhibition was a sort of sartorial library, as somebody has remarked. Now its site over against the northeast corner of the church is covered by Wardrobe Chambers. In the churchyard lie two of "Vandyke's men," and his daughter was baptized there, so there are artistic as well as poetic associations. Indeed, Faithorn, the engraver, was buried there. An old epitaph is preserved in Maitland, but no trace of it is now to be found:

When God was pleased (the world unwilling yet) Helias James to Nature paid his debt. And here repose: as he lived he dy'd. The saying in him strongly verified. Such life, such death, then a long truth to tell, He lived a godly life and dy'd as well.

Helias James was evidently of those whose hand is subdued to what it works in.—Westminster Gazette.

Silas in New York.

A figure that was for a time familiar in up town streets has now appeared down town. It is that of a man in the garb of a countryman carrying an old fashioned valise, upon which an advertisement is painted. Up town he returned at intervals to the shore he came from, looked up at the sign over the door and then walked in, to start out again presently on another round.

Down town he carries two valises, a small, flat valise of the alligator mouth kind, upon the side of which is marked the name "Silas." The other, a big, square, glazed valise, bears the name and announcement of a down town hotel.

Silas, wearing clothes from way back, his trousers tucked in his boots, and a red bandanna around his neck, smooth faced and wearing spectacles, and with a look of profound innocence upon his countenance, wanders about through the busy streets in the lower part of the city. He attracts attention, and that is his business. Incidentally he adds one to the many odd, picturesque and interesting features of the city's varied show.—New York Sun.

The Cattle of Arbelia.

Arbelia, which gave its name to the third great battle between Alexander and Darius, is a town in the Turkish vilayet of Kurdistan, on the caravan route between Bagdad and Mosul, about 40 miles southeast of the latter city. The battle, however, was not really fought at Arbelia, but at a place 30 miles distant, then called Gangamela, now Karmelis.

The farmer is supposed to be about as healthy as it is possible for a man to be. People smile at the idea that a farmer can ever be ill. His occupation is supposed to be an assurance of good health. The contrary is frequently the case. He is the most hard worked of men, and the hard-working man above all others needs to take care of his health. Frequently the farm is in a malarial district. The result is malarial troubles, liver complaint, rheumatism or neuralgia.

The best of all medicines for hard-working men and women is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It invigorates and purifies the blood, driving out the poisons that are responsible for malaria, and the acids that are responsible for rheumatism. It is the greatest of all blood-makers, flesh-builders and nerve tonics. It strengthens the muscles and vitalizes every organ. It brings sweet slumber at night and mental and physical activity during the day. It gives zest to the appetite and makes the digestion perfect. The man or woman who resorts to this wonderful medicine whenever the body is out of sorts will be able to do almost any amount of work without danger to the constitution. Thousands have testified to its marvelous merits. Medicine dealers sell it.

"Your 'Golden Medical Discovery' cured me of a severe case of poisoning of the blood," writes Mrs. Sella Ricca, of Coast, Santa Cruz Co., Cal. "Boils one after another would break out on my arms, and were very painful. I have tried the loudly praised Sarsaparillas without any benefit whatever, and not until I took your 'Discovery' did I get well. That was two years ago, and I have not had a boil or sore of any kind since."

The wise mother looks after the health of every member of the family. In this she cannot have better aid than a copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It contains 1008 pages and over 200 illustrations. It tells all about the home-treatment of ordinary diseases. It used to cost $1.50 a copy; now it is free. For a paper-covered copy send 21 one-cent stamps to cover mailing only, or 31 stamps for cloth binding. Address the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE GLAD HAND.

East Liverpool Extends a Hearty Welcome—Our Citizens Show Appreciation in Public Utterances.

Lack of appreciation is not a failing of our citizens, and the advent of the "little conqueror" was received with the same display of enthusiasm that has spread all over the Union. Coming like a ray of sunshine to every household, casting bairns that many backs have borne for years, is enough to awaken the public to the like of which has never before been heard in this locality. From every ward, from every street comes the same report. Failure is an unknown quantity as far as the "little conqueror" is concerned, and success follows every footstep. Right here at home the triumphs have been many and have set our people talking about the wondrous workings. The following case in point should interest every reader, and it is only one among thousands:

Mr. W. F. Cochran, of Mulberry street, East End, says: "At intervals for thirty years I have had serious kidney and bladder trouble. I have suffered with all the various symptoms in their worst form. The agony I have gone through can hardly be described. Many nights I have rolled from one side to the other trying to find an easy position for my back. I could not move without having sharp twinges of pain and I was also troubled with a urinary difficulty, the secretions being very irregular and at times

CHANGES IN THEIR PLANS

Will Bring the Track Across Lisbon Street and Around the Upper End of the Mill. Board of Trade Members Are Growing somewhat Anxious—The News.

Little has recently been heard of the proposed switch which will connect with the main line some important industries already established and a few that, it is believed, will soon be a part of Wellsville, but the fact that Liverpool landed a big mill has caused the powers to move, and the activity is as a result marked.

In the near future the railroad officials in charge of the matter will confer with the board of trade, and the plans will be carefully discussed.

The engineers have completed the plat of the road, but it is probable some changes will be made before work is commenced. It is now proposed to change it so that it will cross Lisbon street, and pass over the creek on a trestle, coming in above the rolling mill. The reason for these changes is not given, but it is likely to be found in the fact that the railroad men are anxious to make the improvement as complete as possible while they are at it.

It is known that members of the board of trade are eager for the work to begin, and, as the officials are equally anxious, it is believed that a force will be employed at no distant date. The fact that Liverpool landed the Banfield mill has stirred everyone to a realization of the truth that if Wellsville is to have its share of the good things it must get down to work. So many men are pinning their faith to the switch that great things are expected when it is completed.

Living In a Camp.

When Officers Johnson and Thorn were in Beaver county the other day they discovered a camp which contained a number of well known Wellsville people. The boys are snugly situated, and are living very well.

The mere fact that the authorities here would like to interview them does not annoy them in the least, and never causes them to lose a wink of sleep. They have not incurred the displeasure of the people in that vicinity, and seem to be getting along as well as if they lay down in their own cots at home each night.

The officers had no opportunity to speak to any of them, but were convinced of their identity.

Got Her Picture.

The young man who recently found a St. Louis girl's name in a package of cigarettes and sent her a letter, is getting along very well with his unknown correspondent. A number of letters have been exchanged, and recently she rewarded his faithfulness with a picture. His friends believe that he is already manifesting signs of a rapidly growing affection, and say there will be cause for rejoicing soon—if the girl is willing.

Enforcing the Law.

It is said that farmers near this place, who have posted their farms, are enforcing the law to the letter.

A number of Wellsville hunters were ordered from a farm the other day under pain of arrest, and when they wanted to argue the matter with the farmer he quickly told them he was master of the situation, and knew it.

Personal.

Frank Williams, who has been here visiting friends for some time, returned to his home in Canton.

Engineer Davis, of the electric light plant, is off duty because of illness. The superintendent has also been ill, and only returned to his work the other day.

Could Use Two.

The pony used in the yards about this place worked until 10 o'clock last evening. Freight business has been so heavy about the yards of late that two ponies could be used to advantage.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., THURSDAY, DEC. 2.

THE penitentiary cost Ohio $35,000 last year, and it is possible that the Democratic press will be blaming it on Governor Bushnell's administration when the calamity-crying editors hear about it.

THE Democrats of Ohio seem to have reorganized under the auspices of the Hon. William J. Bryan, who will sit quietly by and pull the required string while they vote for him at the next national convention.

SHOULD Hon. R. W. Tayler succeed in convincing congress that the proposed armor plate plant should be built at Youngstown, anyone can tell how the Mahoning delegation will vote in the next district convention.

THE Kansas Populist is a politician as brazen and as well trained as the best Tammany leader that ever lived. The last edict is that any member of the party holding office must pay 2 per cent of his salary for "campaign purposes."

BE VERY CAREFUL.

True Republicans, you who love the grand old party and who long to see it continue in power in East Liverpool, be wise and take warning in time. See to it that the very best men in the party are nominated at the coming spring primaries. The day has gone by when good men and true can be forced or persuaded to vote for a candidate or nominee who is notoriously unfit for the position to which he aspires, and which it has been made possible for him to reach through the low cunning of a class of politicians who are unfit to represent honest, clean and law-abiding citizens. A burned child dreads the fire. Be warned in time. There is trouble in the atmosphere for those who dare attempt the old and foul tactics which have won and held sway in this city for the past few years. Make the primaries amenable to the same laws as those which control at the polls on election day.

HOLMES COUNTY SENSE.

Holmes county, that land where peddlers paid by the Democratic committee sold tin cups for a dollar each and told the people the high price was a direct result of the McKinley bill, has awakened from its long slumber and now deserves a better place in the public mind. It wants its county officers placed on salary and the office of infirmary director abolished. The salaries range from $600 for recorder to $1,500 for auditor. A petition has been numerously signed, and will be presented to the legislature as soon as possible after the session opens.

The Holmes county plan may not be perfect in detail, but there should be no objection to the principle. Those politicians who expect to hold office will, of course, rise up in revolt against the movement, but the conservative taxpayers who annually pay large sums for the support of their county's government will, if they be wise, lend their every effort to secure the enactment of the law.

Not alone is the feeling confined to Holmes county. There are other counties of Ohio where extravagant sums are drawn each year by officials who depend largely upon poorly paid assistants for the actual work of the office. The system is wrong, because it extorts many instances from those who can ill afford to pay, and puts money in the pockets of men who do not earn it.

Go no farther away than our own county, and think of the amount of money expended each year in conducting public affairs. The NEWS REVIEW does not believe in starvation wages any more than it believes in extravagance, but it thinks there is a just and equitable medium which would allow compensation sufficient for the official, and at no time impose upon the taxpayer. Columbian county could, with profit, follow the example of Holmes.

BIG COON HUNT.

The Association Had a Delightful Time.

Thirteen members of the coon hunting association left the city last night at 12 o'clock in a big farm wagon.

They were driven to the home of John L. Miller in Beaver county, where a sumptuous repast was served. They then proceeded to hunt coons, and succeeded in capturing six and one pheasant, blinded by the light. They arrived home at 5 o'clock this morning. The trip was the most successful the association has ever had.

No Games at Present.

The manager of the Rovers this morning received letters from the Rovers and Rangers, of McDonald, Pa., asking for dates here. Games will be arranged just as soon as the protest is settled. A letter was also received from the Jeannette team in which they state that the referee who officiated at Homestead acted as official in their game last Saturday, and they have no desire to have him return although they won by a score of 6 to 2.

The Season Has Closed.

The Twin Cities have dropped the idea of playing a benefit game, and the Rugby football season in the city is now effectually closed.

Plans are being arranged for the team for next year, and it is probable Dennis McCurran will be chosen as captain and coach for the season of '98.

TO THE PUBLIC.

Owing to improvements now being made in the First National Bank building, the banking business will be transacted in the rear room, entrance off alleyway, it being found necessary to close the front doors, in order to expedite said improvements.

TONSILINE CURES SORE THROAT.

Read what a well-known Minister writes us about Tonsiline:

East Palestine, O., April 8, 1895.

The Tonsiline Co.:

I take pleasure in saying that we have used Tonsiline in the family for ulcerated sore throat, and it not only seemed to prevent the attack from being so severe as formerly, but cured the throat completely in a very few days. When any one of us has sore throat of any kind, the rush is for the Tonsiline bottle, and that is the last of it. It is certainly a most excellent remedy.

Yours very truly,

BOUND OVER TO COURT

One Stranger Could Not Explain to the Mayor.

THE OTHER HEARD TOMORROW

Evidence Was Given by the Parties Who Saw the Peculiar Financial Transaction In Wellsville—Other Prisoners Taken to Lisbon.

Charles Edwards, alias C. Everts, one of the young men arrested Tuesday night on a charge preferred by Wellsville parties, was given a hearing by Mayor Gilbert last evening and bound over to court. In default of $100 bail he was returned to jail and will be taken there within a few days.

The testimony of W. L. Fogo and Miss Dearth brought out the facts as given in the NEWS REVIEW yesterday, and warranted the mayor in holding the accused for court.

W. White, his accomplice, was not heard, but will be given a chance to clear himself tomorrow night. All day yesterday the men talked, but what they said no one was able to learn.

John Purpura and George Seibert, charged with burglary, were taken to Lisbon this morning by Chief Johnson. The start was made at 8 o'clock, and by noon both men were safe in Lisbon.

Besides the above, Janitor Donaldson is the only one in custody. He will be released within a few days.

Bullock, who was charged with fighting, was fined $7.60 which he paid.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Collin Kinsey was in Georgetown visiting relatives today.

—Miss Rook returned to Empire last evening. She was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. McCoy, in Second street.

—Miss Jessie Davis, who has been the guest of friends here for several weeks, has returned to her home in Cleveland.

—Miss Laura Wilson returned to Library today. While here she was the guest of her brother, Joe Wilson, in West Market street.

NO POLICEMEN NEEDED.

Only Two Thefts In Iceland In a Thousand Years.

In Iceland there are no prisons, and the inhabitants are so honest in their habits that such defenses to property as locks, bolts and bars are not required, nor are there any police in the island. Yet its history for 1,000 years records no more than two thefts. Of these two cases one was that of a native, who was detected after stealing several sheep, but as he had done so to supply his family, who were suffering for want of food, when he had broken his arm, provisions were furnished to them and work was found for him when able to do it, and meanwhile he was placed under medical care, but the stigma attached to his crime was considered sufficient punishment.

The other theft was by a German, who stole 17 sheep.

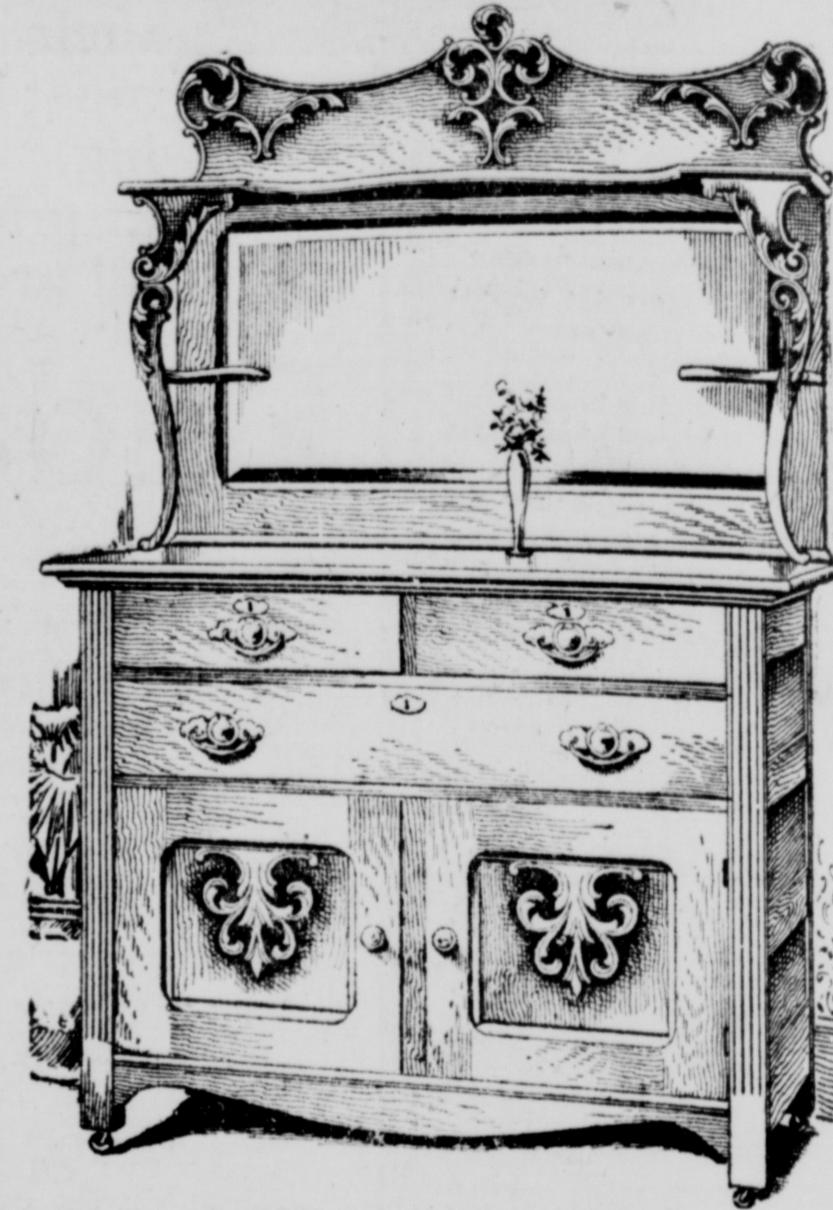

But as he was in comfortable circumstances and the robbery was malicious the sentence passed upon him was that he should sell all his property, restore the value of what he had stolen and then leave the country or be executed, and he left at once. But though crime is rare in Iceland and its inhabitants are distinguished for honesty and purity of morals there is, of course, provision for the administration of justice, which consists, first of all, in the sheriff's courts; next, by appeals to the court of three judges at Reikiavik, the capital, and lastly in all criminal and most civil cases to the supreme court at Copenhagen, the capital of Denmark, of which kingdom the island forms a part. The island of Panaris, one of the Lipari group, is equally fortunate in having neither prisons nor lawyers and being absolutely destitute of both paupers and criminals.—Boston Transcript.

Versatile Dr. Bedloe.

Among the accomplishments of Dr. Edward Bedloe of Philadelphia, the American consul at Canton, China, is remarkable skill in mimicry. He can imitate with his voice the accent and mannerisms of speech of all the leading actors and orators as well as a number of musical instruments. His imitations of the twanging of a banjo are exceedingly accurate. Some years ago Dr. Bedloe was in a room at the Press club when several guests were being entertained in an adjoining apartment. He had been with the party, but had excused himself on the plea that he wanted to get his banjo. He proceeded to "play" a medley and did the imitation so well that the guests would not believe he had not actually performed on an instrument until he repeated the imitation in their presence. He is, moreover, a witty and brilliant conversationalist and a most entertaining raconteur. He has a wonderful memory and has never been known to tell the same story twice.—Philadelphia Press.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., THURSDAY, DEC. 2.

ONION & LACE

THE penitentiary cost Ohio $35,000 last year, and it is possible that the Democratic press will be blaming it on Governor Bushnell's administration when the calamity-crying editors hear about it.

THE Democrats of Ohio seem to have reorganized under the auspices of the Hon. William J. Bryan, who will sit quietly by and pull the required string while they vote for him at the next national convention.

SHOULD Hon. R. W. Tayler succeed in convincing congress that the proposed armor plate plant should be built at Youngstown, anyone can tell how the Mahoning delegation will vote in the next district convention.

THE Kansas Populist is a politician as brazen and as well trained as the best Tammany leader that ever lived. The last edict is that any member of the party holding office must pay 2 per cent of his salary for "campaign purposes."

BE VERY CAREFUL.

True Republicans, you who love the grand old party and who long to see it continue in power in East Liverpool, be wise and take warning in time. See to it that the very best men in the party are nominated at the coming spring primaries. The day has gone by when good men and true can be forced or persuaded to vote for a candidate or nominee who is notoriously unfit for the position to which he aspires, and which it has been made possible for him to reach through the low cunning of a class of politicians who are unfit to represent honest, clean and law-abiding citizens. A burned child dreads the fire. Be warned in time. There is trouble in the atmosphere for those who dare attempt the old and foul tactics which have won and held sway in this city for the past few years. Make the primaries amenable to the same laws as those which control at the polls on election day.

HOLMES COUNTY SENSE.

Holmes county, that land where peddlers paid by the Democratic committee sold tin cans for a dollar each and told the people the high price was a direct result of the McKinley bill, has awakened from its long slumber and now deserves a better place in the public mind. It wants its county officers placed on salary and the office of infirmary director abolished. The salaries range from $600 for recorder to $1,500 for auditor. A petition has been numerously signed, and will be presented to the legislature as soon as possible after the session opens.

The Holmes county plan may not be perfect in detail, but there should be no objection to the principle. Those politicians who expect to hold office will, of course, rise up in revolt against the movement, but the conservative taxpayers who annually pay large sums for the support of their county's government will, if they be wise, lend their every effort to secure the enactment of the law.

Not alone is the feeling confined to Holmes county. There are other counties of Ohio where extravagant sums are drawn each year by officials who depend largely upon poorly paid assistants for the actual work of the office. The system is wrong, because it extorts its many instances from those who can ill afford to pay, and puts money in the pockets of men who do not earn it.

Go no farther away than our own county, and think of the amount of money expended each year in conducting public affairs. The NEWS REVIEW does not believe in starvation wages any more than it believes in extravagance, but it thinks there is a just and equitable medium which would allow compensation sufficient for the official, and at no time impose upon the taxpayer. Columbiana county could, with profit, follow the example of Holmes.

BIG COON HUNT.

The Association Had a Delightful Time.

Thirteen members of the coon hunting association left the city last night at 12 o'clock in a big farm wagon.

They were driven to the home of John L. Miller in Beaver county, where a sumptuous repast was served. They then proceeded to hunt coons, and succeeded in capturing six and one pheasant, blinded by the light. They arrived home at 5 o'clock this morning. The trip was the most successful the association has ever had.

No Games at Present.

The manager of the Rovers this morning received letters from the Rovers and Rangers, of McDonald, Pa., asking for dates here. Games will be arranged just as soon as the protest is settled. A letter was also received from the Jeannette team in which they state that the referee who officiated at Homestead acted as official in their game last Saturday, and they have no desire to have him return although they won by a score of 6 to 2.

The Season Has Closed.

The Twin Cities have dropped the idea of playing a benefit game, and the Rugby football season in the city is now effectually closed.

Plans are being arranged for the team for next year, and it is probable Dennis McCurran will be chosen as captain and coach for the season of '98.

TO THE PUBLIC.

Owing to improvements now being made in the First National Bank building, the banking business will be transacted in the rear room, entrance off alleyway, it being found necessary to close the front doors, in order to expedite said improvements.

TONSILINE CURES SORE THROAT.

Read what a well-known Minister writes us about Tonsiline:

East Palestine, O., April 8, 1895.

The Tonsiline Co.:

I take pleasure in saying that we have used Tonsiline in the family for ulcerated sore throat, and it not only seemed to prevent the attack from being so severe as formerly, but cured the throat completely in a very few days. When any one of us has sore throat of any kind, the rush is for the Tonsiline bottle, and that is the last of it. 't is certainly a most excellent remedy.

Yours very truly,

D. F. DICKSON.

BOUND OVER TO COURT

One Stranger Could Not Explain to the Mayor.

THE OTHER HEARD TOMORROW

Evidence Was Given by the Parties Who Saw the Peculiar Financial Transaction in Wellsville—Other Prisoners Taken to Lisbon.

Charles Edwards, alias C. Everts, one of the young men arrested Tuesday night on a charge preferred by Wellsville parties, was given a hearing by Mayor Gilbert last evening and bound over to court. In default of $100 bail he was returned to jail and will be taken there within a few days.

The testimony of W. L. Fogo and Miss Dearth brought out the facts as given in the NEWS REVIEW yesterday, and warranted the mayor in holding the accused for court.

W. White, his accomplice, was not heard, but will be given a chance to clear himself tomorrow night. All day yesterday the men talked, but what they said no one was able to learn.

John Purpura and George Seibert, charged with burglary, were taken to Lisbon this morning by Chief Johnson. The start was made at 8 o'clock, and by noon both men were safe in Lisbon.

Besides the above, Janitor Donaldson is the only one in custody. He will be released within a few days.

NEW TRIAL FOR KINNEY

His Case Will Be Heard Again Next Wednesday.

MRS. PUTNAM GOT A VERDICT

The Lythe Company Ordered to Pay $3,000 For the Death of Her Husband, but a Motion for a New Trial Was at Once Filed—Other News of the Courts.

LISBON, Dec. 2.—[Special]—Mrs. Putnam was last evening given damages against John Lyth & Sons, Wellsville, for $3,000 for the death of her husband, Archie Putnam.

Four years ago Putnam was killed by a fall of slate from the roof of one of the clay mines operated by the defendants. Mrs. Putnam sued for $10,000, and at the May term of court 1896, was given a verdict for $2,500. This verdict was set aside on a motion filed by the defendants. A motion is again pending for a new trial.

The fourth effort on the part of Salineville parties to commit Elias Stitts to the insane asylum proved successful when Judge Boone last night decided him to be insane. He will be sent to Newburg. Stitts has been in jail five weeks.

Hudson B. Kinney, of East Liverpool, recently convicted of a grave charge, was given a new trial by Judge Smith and his case set for next Wednesday. The claim that new evidence had been found caused the decision.

The seven acre tract of land in Wellsville, belonging to the estate of the late Sarah Russell, will be sold by the sheriff in the partition proceedings instituted by Thomas Russell.

Michael R. Shugler, of Wellsville, has appealed the case in which Dr. F. M. Hatfield recently recovered judgment against him for $65 for professional services.

NEXT WEEK IN COURT.

Judge Taylor, of Carrollton, Will Be on the Bench.

LISBON, Dec. 2.—[Special]—The assignment for next week, Judge Taylor presiding, is as follows:

Tuesday—Vulcan Clay company vs. John Schrader. W. R. Gillespie vs. William Edwards & Co., Ohio vs. Oscar Hendricks, Douglass Stacey, James McGoogan. Wednesday—Hudson B. Kinney, Jennie Lawrence vs. Protected Home Circle. Thursday—Joseph Geon, Joseph Webber, Samuel Whittenberger, Joseph Goddard, Alexander W. Stevenson; I. B. Cameron vs. J. W. Reiley. Friday—Samuel R. Galbreath vs. Amanda Galbreath, Charles M. Day vs. John E. Rodgers.

NOT DETECTIVES

These Amateurs Are Known to Each Other as Informers.

A detective agency with headquarters in Chicago has opened a branch in this city. Several young men have been foolish enough to send a few dollars for a tin badge and a piece of card board.

The would-be detectives do not call themselves such but bear the name informers. They claim they do not make arrests but advise the home officers of the actions of people. Some of the informers say they are going to quit the scheme as the work is too hard.

The scheme is a money maker for those who started it.

DRILLING A WELL.

Work Has Been Started at the Light Plant.

The work of drilling a well at the light plant was commenced this morning.

It is the intention of the contractors to drill to the depth of 80 or 100 feet, or 40 feet below the river bed. The order for the pumps has been placed, and within two weeks the tank will be built. Then, it is said, the water works people will be requested to shut off their supply.

A New Order.

An order has been issued by the post-office authorities to the effect that mail matter not definitely addressed will be held as unmailable and will either be destroyed or sent to the dead letter office, according to its value. It is a favorite dodge among fake advertisers to send a letter to an office addressed to John Smith and down in the corner, "If not found deliver to any druggist," or whatever the particular branch of business advertised may be. This will be done away with by the new order.

Special Grand Jury.

LISBON, Dec. 2.—[Special]—Prosecutor Speaker will call a special grand jury some time during the week of December 13, for the purpose of disposing of all criminal work now pending.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

INSTRUCTED DELEGATES.

Trades Council Held a Very Important Meeting.

The meeting of Trades council last evening was largely attended and decided important.

The business transacted was the instructing of Delegates Rark and Weisend as to what course they should pursue at the convention of the Ohio Federation of Labor which convenes in Columbus next Tuesday. The delegates will be permitted to cast five votes in the convention, or one vote for every 100 people they represent.

The first resolution adopted was one expressing the sentiment of the body that the convict system now in vogue was a detriment to free labor, and demanding that the system be abolished, and that the work of convicts should be toward supporting themselves. The resolution also calls for the abolition of the use of all labor saving machinery in the penitentiary in order to give more employment to individual convicts. The object is to make them non-productive except to supply their own wants without putting them to useless employment.

A resolution was passed condemning the interpretation of the injunction laws, but no remedy was offered, and the resolution takes the nature of a protest.

The council was unanimous in expressing itself in favor of a compulsory arbitration law to settle labor disputes, and were also in favor of the centralization of all labor organizations, and think they should be united under one head.

This closed the resolutions, and E. W. Hill tendered his resignation as secretary of the body, and it will be accepted at the next regular meeting of the organization.

Allen Hayes was appointed to fill a vacancy on the grievance committee.

The per capita tax due to the state organization shows that Trades council represents a membership of 779.

INSPECT GAS FIXTURES.

A Prominent Citizen Gives Chief Morley a Hint.

A prominent business man in commenting on the fire at the Hotel Grand, yesterday, said:

"I see by the NEWS REVIEW that the origin of the fire is unknown, and I think it would be a wise plan for Fire Chief Morley to make another inspection of the gas fixtures in the city. In many places the gas is leaking, and it would take but little to start a disastrous conflagration, when with a little care all danger would be avoided. I think I voice the sentiment of every business man in the city, when I say that an investigation should be made before the cold weather sets in."

MOTHER M'KINLEY DYING.

She Was Stricken by Paralysis This Morning.

CANTON, Dec. 2.—[Special]—Mrs. Nancy McKinley, the aged mother of President McKinley, was stricken by paralysis this morning. She is now in a critical condition, and it is feared that she is dying.

Mrs. McKinley is well known in this city, and the announcement that she is dangerously ill will be heard with deep regret by her friends here.

THE MORMONS

Will Become Active After the First of the Year.

The Mormon elders who spent several days in this city in April, are now speaking in Cincinnati.

Mr. Webb, of Third street, who is identified with the sect in this city, said last evening that although he did not know of any elders being in this section at the present time, he would not be surprised if several were sent here during the first part of next year. If they do come their program will not vary from that observed by those who were here a few months ago.

LISTED FOR THURSDAY

Is Attorney Alex W. Stevenson's Trial.

OTHER CASES THE SAME DAY

So It Is Not Believed the Matter Will Be Heard—Postponement Is Expected For Several Reasons—Judge Taylor Will Be on the Bench.

Attorney Alex W. Stevenson, who was indicted by the last grand jury for forgery and uttering forged paper, and was captured at Kansas City a few weeks ago, will be called to answer in common pleas court next Thursday. Judge Taylor will preside at the trial.

Although the case has been assigned for that date it is not generally believed that it will reach a hearing. There are reasons for postponement, it is said, and at the proper time those reasons will be presented to the court. The case against Stevenson will necessarily require some time, unless he decides to plead guilty and that is not expected, but a number of other cases have been assigned for the same day. If the Stevenson trial is postponed there will still be work for the court.

A DOUBLE WEDDING

Took Place This Afternoon in Calcutta.

A double wedding took place this afternoon at the Presbyterian parsonage in Calcutta, the contracting parties being George Faulk and Miss Margaret Huston, and William Moore and Miss Margaret Faulk.

The contracting parties are well known, Mr. Faulk and Mrs. Moore being the son and daughter of Mrs. James Knepper, of Calcutta. Mr. Moore is also of that place, and Mrs. Faulk is the daughter of Homer Huston, of Calcutta.

The party left for Cleveland this afternoon.

NO SALE.

Deputy Bick Could Not Sell the Soap Works.

The Wellsville soap plant was this morning at 11 o'clock offered for sale by Deputy Sheriff Bick, but as usual there were no bidders.

The property was appraised at $13,500, and this is the fifth time it has been offered at sheriff's sale but not a bid has ever been made. Just as soon as a new order of sale can be issued it will be re-appraised and readvertised for sale.

Small Fire.

A small fire occurred in the house of William Kennedy in Second street, this morning. Kennedy was in the act of starting a fire in a stove when a spark from the match touched some towels hanging nearby. He went after some water, but the hydrant was frozen.

The burning articles were extinguished without the aid of the department.

AN EVERYDAY HEROINE.

The Country Maiden, the Wicked Stage Company and the Tailor Made Girl.

Four reckless persons had clambered into the stage, an old man, a middle aged woman, a young man and a tailor made girl. At Fiftieth street a dressmaker's little girl struggled in with a huge box. Town life was evidently new to her. Her rosy cheeks announced country air to the least observing. She held her money in her hand.

Looking dubiously about, she finally spied the money box and dropped in the coin. After this she waited expectantly. Nothing occurred, however, and she began flushing and paling with nervous indecision. At last she resolutely stood up, attracted the driver's attention and called to him:

"How do I get my change? I put a quarter in the box," she asked.

"Yes, you oughter a-handed it up," said the man. "Yes, can't git it now."

"But it's all I have," protested the girl.

"Git it off the new passengers," yelled the driver and turned away.

It was all the money she had, but how could she "get it off the new passengers?" Every one in the stage had become interested, but no one volunteered any advice. Two tears rolled down the rosy cheeks.

The stage stopped, and an old lady scrambled in. As she took out her money, a 5 cent piece, the tailor made girl leaned over to her.

"Will you give me that for this little girl?" she asked. "She dropped in a quarter by mistake, and the driver said the new passengers might make it up to her."

The old lady beamingly handed over the nickel. She felt that the stage company was being rigidly but justly dealt with at last.

Then a man got in. This was harder for the tailor made girl, but she made the request again and handed a second fare to the grateful young person from the country. The whole stageful was now interested watching for a new passenger as a spider watches for a fly. A woman waved desperately from down a side street for the stage to wait for her, but the driver passed on unheeding and exclamations of disgust arose. Another corner, and another smartly dressed girl got in. The new arrival did not seem at first to understand the request, and, flushing, the tailor made girl repeated it and secured one more of the precious 5 cent pieces.

The little girl had reached her destination.

"I am so much obliged," she murmured to the heroic maiden who had been taking up fares in her behalf. "I ought to get out here, so I guess I'll let the other go."

"No, no, you must not," said the fair conductor, opening her purse. "Take this and I can get it from the next one who gets in."

"You are awfully good," murmured the unsuspecting little one with new tears in her eyes, and one of the men took the big box and handed it down to her when she had stepped out.

The stage rattled on and the tailor made girl looked unconcernedly out of the window. The next passenger was allowed to drop his fare un molested into the box, unconscious of the little comedy that had brought the others together in a common interest for a moment, and the stage company was still ahead of the game.—New York Sun.

Mrs. Putnam sued for $10,000, and at the May term of court 1896, was given a verdict for $2,500. This verdict was set aside on a motion filed by the defendants. A motion is again pending for a new trial.

The fourth effort on the part of Salineville parties to commit Elias Stitts to the insane asylum proved successful when Judge Boone last night decided him to be insane. He will be sent to Newburg. Stitts has been in jail five weeks.

Hudson B. Kinney, of East Liverpool, recently convicted of a grave charge, was given a new trial by Judge Smith and his case set for next Wednesday. The claim that new evidence had been found caused the decision.

The seven acre tract of land in Wellsville, belonging to the estate of the late Sarah Russell, will be sold by the sheriff in the partition proceedings instituted by Thomas Russell.

Michael R. Shungler, of Wellsville, has appealed the case in which Dr. F. M. Hatfield recently recovered judgment against him for $65 for professional services.

NEXT WEEK IN COURT.

Judge Taylor, of Carrollton, Will Be on the Bench.

LISBON, Dec. 2.—[Special]—The assignment for next week, Judge Taylor presiding, is as follows:

Tuesday—Vulcan Clay company vs. John Schrader, W. R. Gillespie vs. William Edwards & Co., Ohio vs. Oscar Hendricks, Douglass Stacey, James McGoogan. Wednesday—Hudson B. Kinney, Jennie Lawrence vs. Protected Home Circle. Thursday—Joseph Geon, Joseph Webber, Samuel Whittenberger, Joseph Goddard, Alexander W. Stevenson; I. B. Cameron vs. J. W. Reiley. Friday—Samuel R. Galbreath vs. Amanda Galbreath, Charles M. Day vs. John E. Rodgers.

NOT DETECTIVES

These Amateurs Are Known to Each Other as Informers.

A detective agency with headquarters in Chicago has opened a branch in this city. Several young men have been foolish enough to send a few dollars for a tin badge and a piece of card board.

The would-be detectives do not call themselves such but bear the name informers. They claim they do not make arrests but advise the home officers of the actions of people. Some of the informers say they are going to quit the scheme as the work is too hard.

The scheme is a money maker for those who started it.

DRILLING A WELL.

Work Has Been Started at the Light Plant.

The work of drilling a well at the light plant was commenced this morning.

It is the intention of the contractors to drill to the depth of 80 or 100 feet, or 40 feet below the river bed. The order for the pumps has been placed, and within two weeks the tank will be built. Then, it is said, the water works people will be requested to shut off their supply.

A New Order.

An order has been issued by the post-office authorities to the effect that mail matter not definitely addressed will be held as unmailable and will either be destroyed or sent to the dead letter office, according to its value. It is a favorite dodge among fake advertisers to send a letter to an office addressed to John Smith and down in the corner, "If not found deliver to any druggist," or whatever the particular branch of business advertised may be. This will be done away with by the new order.

SPECIAL GRAND JURY.

LISBON, Dec. 2.—[Special]—Prosecutor Speaker will call a special grand jury some time during the week of December 13, for the purpose of disposing of all criminal work now pending.

LISTED FOR THURSDAY

IS ATTORNEY ALEX W. STEVENSON'S TRIAL.

OTHER CASES THE SAME DAY

So It Is Not Believed the Matter Will Be Heard—Postponement Is Expected For Several Reasons—Judge Taylor Will Be on the Bench.

Attorney Alex W. Stevenson, who was indicted by the last grand jury for forgery and uttering forged paper, and was captured at Kansas City a few weeks ago, will be called to answer in common pleas court next Thursday. Judge Taylor will preside at the trial.

Although the case has been assigned for that date it is not generally believed that it will reach a hearing. There are reasons for postponement, it is said, and at the proper time those reasons will be presented to the court. The case against Stevenson will necessarily require some time, unless he decides to plead guilty and that is not expected, but a number of other cases have been assigned for the same day. If the Stevenson trial is postponed there will still be work for the court.

A DOUBLE WEDDING

Took Place This Afternoon In Calcutta.

A double wedding took place this afternoon at the Presbyterian parsonage in Calcutta, the contracting parties being George Faulk and Miss Margaret Huston, and William Moore and Miss Margaret Faulk.

The contracting parties are well known, Mr. Faulk and Mrs. Moore being the son and daughter of Mrs. James Knepper, of Calcutta. Mr. Moore is also of that place, and Mrs. Faulk is the daughter of Homer Huston, of Calcutta.

The party left for Cleveland this afternoon.

NO SALE.

Deputy Bick Could Not Sell the Soap Works.

The Wellsville soap plant was this morning at 11 o'clock offered for sale by Deputy Sheriff Bick, but as usual there were no bidders.

The property was appraised at $13,500, and this is the fifth time it has been offered at sheriff's sale but not a bid has ever been made. Just as soon as a new order of sale can be issued it will be re-appraised and readvertised for sale.

SMALL FIRE.

A small fire occurred in the house of William Kennedy in Second street, this morning. Kennedy was in the act of starting a fire in a stove when a spark from the match touched some towels hanging nearby. He went after some water, but the hydrant was frozen.

The burning articles were extinguished without the aid of the department.

TO THE PUBLIC.

Owing to improvements now being made in the First National Bank building, the banking business will be transacted in the rear room, entrance off alleyway, it being found necessary to close the front doors, in order to expedite said improvements.

Those Who Are Ill.

Mrs. George Kessner is very ill at her home in West End suffering with pneumonia. Her recovery is doubtful.

The four-months-old twins of Frank Fisher, West End, are very ill.

Public Will Make Note.

By mutual agreement, the grocers of East Liverpool have agreed that the closing hour shall be 7 p.m., until further notice.

AN EVERYDAY HEROINE.

The Country Maiden, the Wicked Stage Company and the Tailor Made Girl.

Four reckless persons had clambered into the stage, an old man, a middle aged woman, a young man and a tailor made girl. At Fiftieth street a dress maker's little girl struggled in with a huge box. Town life was evidently new to her. Her rosy cheeks announced country air to the least observing. She held her money in her hand.

Looking dubiously about, she finally spied the money box and dropped in the coin. After this she waited expectantly. Nothing occurred, however, and she began flushing and paling with nervous indecision. At last she resolutely stood up, attracted the driver's attention and called to him:

"How do I get my change? I put a quarter in the box," she asked.

"Yese oughter a-handed it up," said the man. "Yese can't git it now."

"But it's all I have," protested the girl.

"Git it off the new passengers," yelled the driver and turned away.

It was all the money she had, but how could she "get it off the new passengers?" Every one in the stage had become interested, but no one volunteered any advice. Two tears rolled down the rosy cheeks.

The stage stopped, and an old lady scrambled in. As she took out her money, a 5 cent piece, the tailor made girl leaned over to her:

"Will you give me that for this little girl?" she asked. "She dropped in a quarter by mistake, and the driver said the new passengers might make it up to her."

The old lady beamingly handed over the nickel. She felt that the stage company was being rigidly but justly dealt with at last.

Then a man got in. This was harder for the tailor made girl, but she made the request again and handed a second fare to the grateful young person from the country. The whole stageful was now interested watching for a new passenger as a spider watches for a fly. A woman waved desperately from down a side street for the stage to wait for her, but the driver passed on unheeding and exclamations of disgust arose. Another corner, and another smartly dressed girl got in. The new arrival did not seem at first to understand the request, and, flushing, the tailor made girl repeated it and secured one more of the precious 5 cent pieces.

The little girl had reached her destination.

"I am so much obliged," she murmured to the heroic maiden who had been taking up fares in her behalf. "I ought to get out here, so I guess I'll let the other go."

"No, no, you must not," said the fair conductor, opening her purse. "Take this and I can get it from the next one who gets in."

"You are awfully good," murmured the unsuspecting little one with new tears in her eyes, and one of the men took the big box and handed it down to her when she had stepped out.

The stage rattled on and the tailor made girl looked unconcernedly out of the window. The next passenger was allowed to drop his fare unmolested into the box, unconscious of the little comedy that had brought the others together in a common interest for a moment, and the stage company was still ahead of the game—New York Sun.

REPAIRING LINES.

"You're a mess for a spring chicken," said the angry husband.

"You're the same old goose," came the answer with a snap.—Detroit Free Press.

Experts have come to the conclusion that what kills trees in London is not the soot flakes nor the want of air nor the drought, but the sewer gas, which attacks the roots, so that the tree soon withers and dies.

A PURE FOOD AGENT

Was Here on a Little Important Business.

WHAT HE DID WILL APPEAR

But Not Before the Department Has Its Case Prepared and Is Ready to Act—It Is Believed to Be in Connection With the Crusade Against Poisons.

The poor food commission does not often find its way to this particular part of Ohio, but one of its agents slipped into the city during this week, and transacted a considerable amount of business before he left.

Some time ago the department instituted a crusade against poisons in patent medicines, and it was decided that every bottle or other package containing the slightest proportion of poison should be appropriately labeled. Agents were at once sent into the principal cities, and the howl that followed could be heard all over the state. Having gotten the work well under way the department transferred its attention to the smaller places, and that is why an agent came here.

His business was not announced to the world, but it is known that whatever were its details he was successful. The next chapter will be told in developments at Columbus.

HOWARD FOR SPEAKER

The Belmont Man Is Making a Hard Fight.

His friends in this city believe that Hon. Charles J. Howard, of Barnesville, stands a very good chance of being the speaker of the next house of representatives.

Mr. Howard has been making a quiet fight for the place, in spite of the claim that Mr. Boxwell would have his own way when it came to an election.

Gems of the Apostles.

One would think the 12 apostles were rich gentlemen, judging by the freedom with which the ancients assigned them emblems in the way of precious stones. Thus Peter, the Rock, was represented by the hard jasper; Andrew was given the blue sapphire as the emblem of heavenly faith. Bartholomew, the martyr, was assigned the blood red carnelian; James the affectionate, the white chalcedon, and the gentle, loving John the emerald. With the same view to fitness, James the younger was assigned the topaz, and the enthusiastic and energetic Matthew the amethyst, while the chrysolite was the emblem of Matthias; the beryl, Thomas; the chrysoprase, Thaddeus, and the pink hyacinth, Simon of Cana. To the present day the emblem of Matthew is the sacred stone ornamenting cross and pastoral ring of the Roman Catholics.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Busy at the Depot.

The outbound platform of the freight depot presented a busy scene this morning. There was scarcely room for a dray to pass through, and several were waiting out side for a turn to unload. A large number of cars were loaded yesterday, and business during the balance of the month is expected to be brisk.

More cars were loaded at the sheds yesterday than in any day for several weeks. A large amount of ware is now being sent to lake ports.

Paid For His Anger.

Richard Barr last evening appeared at the office of Squire Hill to answer to a charge of disorderly conduct preferred by his father-in-law, Walter Young, Sr. He plead guilty, and was assessed $7.60, which he paid.

The trouble occurred last Sunday evening, when Barr called at the home of his father-in-law in East End and acted in a very boisterous manner.

Will Hear Moody.

Dwight L. Moody, the great evangelist, opened a series of meetings in the Exposition building, in Pittsburg, this afternoon. He will remain there some time. A number of persons from this city will hear Mr. Moody preach tomorrow night.

Visited the Mayor.

Detective Shifler, of the Cleveland and Pittsburg force, was in the city yesterday the guest of Mayor Gilbert. There was nothing special connected with his visit, it being one of pleasure and a wait between trains.

An Army Meeting.

Ensign Withers, junior staff secretary, of Cincinnati, will be in the city tomorrow for the purpose of conducting a special service at the Salvation Army barracks in Fourth street.

Jacob Stein was a Pittsburg visitor today.

Old Settlers' Yarns.

They were two old pioneers of upper Michigan entertaining the gullible reporters.

"When I first came to this region," said the veteran who owns a log cabin, a flatboat and a turnip patch, "we had a good deal of trouble with bears. They'd come sniffin' round the shanty at night, and you could go out any mornin' and lay in a stock of bear beef. 'Bout the best luck I ever had was one fall when I was pokin' about just beyond the clearin'. I was shovin' a bullet home with an iron ramrod when I see a she bear and three cubs comin' toward me. They see me at the same time, and all went up in a row on their hind legs. Of course I was naturally excited and banged away. When the smoke cleared there was them four bears strung on that ramrod, and there wasn't a good kick left in none of 'em."

The other entertainer looked troubled for a few seconds, but soon rallied and looked as honest as an owl.

"Hank," he began, "you mus' recollect that red cow of mine. There was the beatinest critter I ever see. She could ketch more fish than airy a man in the settlement. She wasn't no expense 'cause she could steal a livin' the year round. She could pick a lock with her horns, and ole Jim Clayter swears he see her climb a tree after a black bear once. I won't make no affidavit to that, but I know she used to bring in bear reg'ler. She could do more with them horns of horn than any man could with a rifle. Wasn't she a corker, Hank?"

"I hain't spinnin' this here yarn, Lige," declared the other pioneer, who was plainly jealous, "but the only cow you ever owned since you come up here was a mooley."

Though they are both old they are as tough as pine knots, and it took five minutes to part them. The friendship of years is broken and each declares the other the prince of liars.—Detroit Free Press.

Altitude and Phthisis.

I have spent considerable time in traveling in the Catskills, Adirondacks and the Rocky mountains, investigating with some care these localities, with their varying altitudes above sea level and their influence upon the lungs, and, while perhaps a high and dry and lighter air may be beneficial in some diseases and for its influence upon the general health, I do not believe that it has the slightest effect upon the growth an proliferation of the tubercle bacillus itself. In this opinion I am heartily confirmed by the judgment of many able and careful practitioners with whom I have most earnestly conversed, and I repeat that altitude has no influence whatever in destroying the tubercle bacillus.

A considerable experience with this disease has led me to believe that no place is better for its treatment than New York city. Patients have come to me from every state in the Union, from Canada, from the Sandwich Islands and from Europe, and it appears to be the general belief among them all that the climate of New York city, with its clear air and bright sunshine, is quite as favorable under all circumstances as is that of most other localities. I have under my care at this time patients from several towns in Colorado, from New Mexico and California, and all are doing better in this city than in their own localities.—Dr. Hubbard Winslow Mitchell in New York Medical Record.

Leprosy.

Leprosy is an exclusively human disease. It is not inoculable to animals. It is never of spontaneous origin, but is invariably derived from the lesions or secretions of a person similarly diseased. Its development in a country previously exempt from the disease may always be traced to its importation in the person of a leper from an infected center. We know nothing definitely of the mode of infection or the channels of entrance through which the bacillus gains access to the organism—whether by direct contact, by inhalation or imbibition of the germs or by other intermediaries. Observation proves conclusively that every leper is a possible source of danger to all with whom he may come into intimate and prolonged contact.—Dr. Prince A. Morrow in North American Review.

He Favored the Idea.

"My dear," he said as he laid down the paper, "you ought to read that address by Mrs. Mouser, the eminent lecturer, on woman's work. She says that whenever a wife gets angry she should stop and carefully consider the matter for ten minutes before saying a word to her husband. That's a grand idea."

"It is, eh?"

"I consider it so."

"And where will you be when I begin talking?"

"Oh, I don't know—somewhere down town, I presume, but don't let that interfere with you at all."

And she was so mad that she didn't say a word for the full time limit.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Bearded Belles of Ancient Rome.

Among the Roman women at one period there was a morbid ambition to grow beards, and they used to shave their faces and smear them with unguents to produce these inappropriate appendages. Cicero tells us that at one time to such an extent did the mania for beards grow upon women that it was found desirable to pass a law against the "adornment."—San Francisco Chronicle.

DOES SHE LOVE

Does she love me? That is Greek—
Far too deep for me to know.
Do the sweet lips always speak
From the heart's deep overflow?
Can I tell each gentle sign
Is the breath of answering love?
Are the glances of her eye
Forged by Cupid or by Jove?
Only this to me is known—
That I love her, her alone.
Only this I clearly see—
She is more than earth can be.
And full half of heaven to me.

Does she love me? Do I know
Christ has risen from the tomb?
Or where roses, when they blow,
Get their color and perfume?
Faith would have no mission here,
Hope would still it heaven be,
If I did not trust the dear
Pledges of her love for me.
Though I cannot prove it mine
By an algebraic sign,
Yet, as love divinely grows,
It believes and feels and shows.
Thus through soul and every sense
Her true love gives evidence,
And I clear and clearer see
She is more than earth can be
And full half of heaven to me.

—Charles M. Dickinson.

A WOMAN'S WIT.

She Braved Her Husband's Anger and Boosted Him to Success.

"Know him?" asked one of the two men talking at the corner as he nodded toward a handsome old gentleman just passing by. "No? Well, sir, that's Dr. Blank, the noted surgeon. I've known him ever since we used to frequent the same swimming hole. Just how long that was before the war I'm not going to say. He beat me in the race for the girl that he married, and if he hadn't the chances are that the doctor would still be driving, night and day, over a little back county, attending to a practice that couldn't pay if it wanted to.

"When they were back there in the woods and he was performing operations that no other member of the profession had thought of undertaking, she gathered from the talk of friendly doctors in the same section that he was original, daring and successful. She begged him to advertise his abilities, but he sternly rebuked her for asking him to transgress the ethics of the profession.

"But you know how it is when a bright woman sets her head. The doctor's office was a shabby little den without carpet, window shades, pictures or anything else but the plainest furniture. He resisted all her efforts to change this. One evening he came home from a 36 hours' stay with a patient to find that office so transformed in velvet carpet, tapestries and pictures that he flatly declined to enter it. His wife was away on a visit. Men had been there, done the work and disappeared. There were no bills, the home merchants knew nothing, and the doctor was so mad that he advertised everything for sale. The thing was told in the local papers as a huge joke, and incidentally there were related some of the stories of how he took people apart and put them together again. City papers copied and city doctors ridiculed. This riled Blank. He proved that he had worked greater wonders than were credited to him, and he was famous. The means and the end were the work of the little woman who had figured them out before giving a secret commission to furnish that office."—Detroit Free Press.

Herrmann and the Cheat.

A characteristic story is told of Herrmann. The incident took place at a well known London club, where ecarte was one of the favorite games indulged in for stakes by no means insignificant. It was observed that on these occasions a certain member almost invariably rose a considerable winner. At length so marked became the good fortune of this member that another determined to probe the matter to the bottom. One evening, accordingly, at his own rooms, he introduced Herrmann under a false name to a select party of the members, among whom figured the suspected one.

At the close of the night's amusement, when the guests had departed, the host turned to the conjurer and demanded his opinion. "Not a doubt of it," replied Herrmann, "our friend cheats, but exactly how I can't say yet. Give me another chance." A second meeting was subsequently arranged, and play began. Suddenly Herrmann, looking straight at the supposed culprit, exclaimed, "Where did you get that king?" "Where?" replied the other. "Out of the pack, of course." "Impossible, my dear sir," retorted Herrmann, "for I happen to have all the four kings here," and thereupon he calmly drew them from his sleeve and laid them on the table.—St. James Gazette.

Dress Reform For Babies.

The latest invention in the dress reform for babies, which is rapidly becoming more popular, is that all the garments can be put on at once. The first garment is a princess slip of fine flannel or crepe, made with high neck and long sleeves. The next is a sleeveless garment of nearly the same shape and material, and last comes the nainsook dress. All three fasten together at the back with three buttons. The abdominal band is sheer and not tight, and the feet are left bare.

The oldest sailing craft in the world is the so called Gokstad ship, a viking vessel which was discovered in a sepulchral mound on the shores of Christiania fiord. It is 1,000 years old.

Dwight L. Moody, the great evangelist, opened a series of meetings in the Exposition building, in Pittsburg, this afternoon. He will remain there some time. A number of persons from this city will hear Mr. Moody preach tomorrow night.

Visited the Mayor.

Detective Shiffler, of the Cleveland and Pittsburg force, was in the city yesterday the guest of Mayor Gilbert. There was nothing special connected with his visit, it being one of pleasure and a wait between trains.

An Army Meeting.

Ensign Withers, junior staff secretary, of Cincinnati, will be in the city tomorrow for the purpose of conducting a special service at the Salvation Army barracks in Fourth street.

Jacob Stein was a Pittsburg visitor today.

Old Settlers' Yarns.

They were two old pioneers of upper Michigan entertaining the gullible reporters.

"When I first came to this region," said the veteran who owns a log cabin, a flatboat and a turnip patch, "we had a good deal of trouble with bears. They'd come sniffin' round the shanty at night, and you could go out any mornin' and lay in a stock of bear beef. 'Bout the best luck I ever had was one fall when I was pokin' about just beyond the clearin'. I was shovin' a bullet home with an iron ramrod when I see a she bear and three cubs comin' toward me. They see me at the same time, and all went up in a row on their hind legs. Of course I was naturally excited and banged away. When the smoke cleared there was them four bears strung on that ramrod, and there wasn't a good kick left in none of 'em."

The other entertainer looked troubled for a few seconds, but soon rallied and looked as honest as an owl.

"Hank," he began, "you mus' recollect that red cow of mine. There was the beatinest critter I ever see. She could ketton more fish than airy a man in the settlement. She wasn't no expense 'cause she could steal a livin' the year round. She could pick a lock with her horns, and ole Jim Clayer swears he see her climb a tree after a black bear once. I won't make no affidavy to that, but I know she used to bring in bear reg'ler. She could do more with them horns of hern than any man could with a rifle. Wasn't she a corker, Hank?"

"I hain't spinnin' this here yarn, Lige," declared the other pioneer, who was plainly jealous, "but the only cow you ever owned since you come up here was a mooley."

Though they are both old they are as tough as pine knots, and it took five minutes to part them. The friendship of years is broken and each declares the other the prince of liars.—Detroit Free Press.

Altitude and Phthisis.

I have spent considerable time in traveling in the Catskills, Adirondacks and the Rocky mountains, investigating with some care these localities, with their varying altitudes above sea level and their influence upon the lungs, and, while perhaps a high and dry and lighter air may be beneficial in some diseases and for its influence upon the general health, I do not believe that it has the slightest effect upon the growth an proliferation of the tubercle bacillus itself. In this opinion I am heartily confirmed by the judgment of many able and careful practitioners with whom I have most earnestly conversed, and I repeat that altitude has no influence whatever in destroying the tubercle bacillus.

A considerable experience with this disease has led me to believe that no place is better for its treatment than New York city. Patients have come to me from every state in the Union, from Canada, from the Sandwich Islands and from Europe, and it appears to be the general belief among them all that the climate of New York city, with its clear air and bright sunshine, is quite as favorable under all circumstances as is that of most other localities. I have under my care at this time patients from several towns in Colorado, from New Mexico and California, and all are doing better in this city than in their own localities.—Dr. Hubbard Winslow Mitchell in New York Medical Record.

Leprosy.

Leprosy is an exclusively human disease. It is not inoculable to animals. It is never of spontaneous origin, but is invariably derived from the lesions or secretions of a person similarly diseased. Its development in a country previously exempt from the disease may always be traced to its importation in the person of a leper from an infected center. We know nothing definitely of the mode of infection or the channels of entrance through which the bacillus gains access to the organism—whether by direct contact, by inhalation or imbibition of the germs or by other intermediaries. Observation proves conclusively that every leper is a possible source of danger to all with whom he may come into intimate and prolonged contact.—Dr. Prince A. Morrow in North American Review.

Be Favored the Idea.

"My dear," he said as he laid down the paper, "you ought to read that address by Mrs. Mouser, the eminent lecturer, on woman's work. She says that whenever a wife gets angry she should stop and carefully consider the matter for ten minutes before saying a word to her husband. That's a grand idea."

"It is, eh?"

"I consider it so."

"And where will you be when I begin talking?"

"Oh, I don't know—somewhere down town, I presume, but don't let that interfere with you at all."

And she was so mad that she didn't say a word for the full time limit.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Bearded Belles of Ancient Rome.

Among the Roman women at one period there was a morbid ambition to grow beards, and they used to shave their faces and smear them with unguents to produce these inappropriate appendages. Cicero tells us that at one time to such an extent did the mania for beards grow upon women that it was found desirable to pass a law against the "adornment."—San Francisco Chronicle.

DOES SHE LOVE ME.

Does she love me? That is Greek—Far too deep for me to know. Do the sweet lips always speak From the heart's deep overflow? Can I tell each gentle sigh Is the breath of answering love? Are the glances of her eye Forged by Cupid or by Jove? Only this to me is known—That I love her, her alone. Only this I clearly see—She is more than earth can be And full half of heaven to me.

Does she love me? Do I know Christ has risen from the tomb? Or where roses, when they blow, Get their color and perfume? Faith would have no mission here. Hope would still it heaven be. If I did not trust the dear Pledge of her love for me. Though I cannot prove it mine By an algebraic sign, Yet, as love divinely grows, It believes and feels and flows. Thus through soul and every sense Her true love gives evidence, And I clear and clearer see She is more than earth can be And full half of heaven to me.—Charles M. Dickinson.

A WOMAN'S WIT.

She Braved Her Husband's Anger and Boosted Him to Success.

"Know him?" asked one of the two men talking at the corner as he nodded toward a handsome old gentleman just passing by. "No? Well, sir, that's Dr. Blank, the noted surgeon. I've known him ever since we used to frequent the same swimming hole. Just how long that was before the war I'm not going to say. He beat me in the race for the girl that he married, and if he hadn't the chances are that the doctor would still be driving, night and day, over a little back county, attending to a practice that couldn't pay if it wanted to.

"When they were back there in the woods and he was performing operations that no other member of the profession had thought of undertaking, she gathered from the talk of friendly doctors in the same section that he was original, daring and successful. She begged him to advertise his abilities, but he sternly rebuked her for asking him to transgress the ethics of the profession.

"But you know how it is when a bright woman sets her head. The doctor's office was a shabby little den without carpet, window shades, pictures or anything else but the plainest furniture. He resisted all her efforts to change this. One evening he came home from a 36 hours' stay with a patient to find that office so transformed in velvet carpet, tapestries and pictures that he flatly declined to enter it. His wife was away on a visit. Men had been there, done the work and disappeared. There were no bills, the home merchants knew nothing, and the doctor was so mad that he advertised everything for sale. The thing was told in the local papers as a huge joke, and incidentally there were related some of the stories of how he took people apart and put them together again. City papers copied and city doctors ridiculed. This riled Blank. He proved that he had worked greater wonders than were credited to him, and he was famous. The means and the end were the work of the little woman who had figured them out before giving a secret commission to furnish that office."—Detroit Free Press.

Herrmann and the Cheat.

A characteristic story is told of Herrmann. The incident took place at a well known London club, where ecarte was one of the favorite games indulged in for stakes by no means insignificant.

It was observed that on these occasions a certain member almost invariably rose a considerable winner. At length so marked became the good fortune of this member that another determined to probe the matter to the bottom. One evening, accordingly, at his own rooms, he introduced Herrmann under a false name to a select party of the members, among whom figured the suspected one.

At the close of the night's amusement, when the guests had departed, the host turned to the conjurer and demanded his opinion. "Not a doubt of it," replied Herrmann, "our friend cheats, but exactly how I can't say yet. Give me another chance." A second meeting was subsequently arranged, and play began. Suddenly Herrmann, looking straight at the supposed culprit, exclaimed, "Where did you get that king?" "Wher?" replied the other. "Out of the pack, of course." "Impossible, my dear sir," retorted Herrmann, "for I happen to have all the four kings here," and therupon he calmly drew them from his sleeve and laid them on the table.—St. James Gazette.

Dress Reform For Babies.

The latest invention in the dress reform for babies, which is rapidly becoming more popular, is that all the garments can be put on at once. The first garment is a princess slip of fine flannel or crepe, made with high neck and long sleeves. The next is a sleeveless garment of nearly the same shape and material, and last comes the nainsook dress. All three fasten together at the back with three buttons. The abdominal band is sheer and not tight, and the feet are left bare.

Oldest Sailing Craft.

The oldest sailing craft in the world is the so called Gokstad ship, a viking vessel which was discovered in a sepulchral mound on the shores of Christiania fjord. It is 1,000 years old.

IT'S A HAPPY FAMILY

But It Can Scarcely Be a Compliment to Civilization.

SEVEN LIVE IN ONE SMALL ROOM

Not so very far from the Business Heart of the City Are Enacted Scenes Which Should Not Be. Yet They Have Continued for Some Time.

There are scores of people in East Liverpool who would throw up their hands in holy horror if they knew that right here in the heart of the city are enacted scenes which would do justice to a Hottentot's hut or the abode of a humble islander in far off Polynesia. Yet the story is true, every word of it, and even while it is being told the condition really exists.

It is a family and one boarder. The husband and father is absent from the city, a part of his life's program, he will readily assure you, he had no part in making. When he went away he left a wife, one grown daughter and two sons bordering on manhood who had no alternative but to get along as best they could without the influence of his none too carefully trained hand. They decided their family was not large enough, and a boarder was added to the number.

And that is how they live, all of them in one room. There they sleep and eat and live at least some portion of their time. There are many features connected with the arrangement that are disgusting in the extreme; there are others that are sad enough to make the heart of the average human being go eat in pity. That this thing can be in an enlightened community, filled with at least its share of churches, schools and church-going people, is one of the things at present unexplainable.

The owner of the property has only recently learned of the matter, and is doing all he can to rid himself of his troublesome tenants, believing that an empty room without rent is more to be desired than the same apartment when it contains such a large population.

THIS SPEAKS VOLUMES.

Warm Words of Commendation of Dr. Wood's Skill.

CONNEAUT, OHIO, NOV. 26, 1897.
Dr. WOOD, DEAR Sir—I wrote you a letter a week ago. Sent it to Niagara Falls; received no answer, so will send this to Cleveland. Have been feeling quiet well; am gaining fast. Gained ten pounds since I began taking treatment from you, October 11. Am out of medicine. Will you send me, or shall I wait until you come to Conneaut again? If you receive this letter, please answer, and oblige.

Respectfully Yours,
MISS EVELYN GREEN.

The Theater.

Hubert Labadie's company will appear in "Faust" at the Grand tomorrow evening, and a splendid production is expected. The company is first class, and the electrical effects are wonderful.

"Hot Time" comes to the Grand Saturday night with one of the brightest and best performances of the season.

Aldora Shem's presentation of "The Bells" next Monday evening is eagerly awaited by the young tragedian's many admirers in this city. The piece is a startling one, and well worthy the admiration it has been granted.

On the River.

The Ohio has fallen but three inches since yesterday, and the marks today show 9.11 feet in the channel.

The Queen City passed down last night with an immense load of freight and a large passenger list.

The Ben Hur is the only packet up today and the Bedford is due down tomorrow night.

The Defender went up this morning with a heavy tow, and the Tom Dods-worth went up last night with the largest tow of empties ever sent up the river. Business brisk at this port.

Moved to Toronto.

John Smalley and Harry Clutters, of Wellsville, John O'Hanlon, of East Liverpool, moved their families to our city yesterday.

Mr. Clutters said the freight traffic was so great that he could not get his goods shipped until late last evening.—Toronto Tribune.

Good News For People of East Liverpool. At the urgent request of the people of East Liverpool the U-No-Tonic company has decided to remain a short while longer to enable all to get U-No remedies at same old prices.

Bright and Spicy—the NEWS REVIEW

Rather Personal.

"Ladies," said the chairman of the meeting of the Woman's Advanced Thought and Practical Experience club, "this meeting, I believe, was announced to be a symposium on the subject of Apartment House Nuisances."

There was a murmur of assent and approval, and from the way every woman in the hall straightened up it was evident that there wasn't one of them who didn't feel that she had something important to say on the subject.

"I hope," continued the chairman, "that we will be able to get through this afternoon, but it is unquestionably a most comprehensive subject, and, with your permission, I will undertake to divide it so that we can take up one feature at a time."

"So lovely!" "Just the thing!" and "How nice!" came from various parts of the hall.

"I would suggest that we first take up the landlord, as he!"

Cries of "Mean thing!" "Promised us a porcelain bathtub a year ago!" "Won't paper the hall!" etc.

"is one of the greatest of flat building evils. After disposing of him, I think perhaps the janitor"—

Cries of "Disobliging creature!" "Freezes us to death!" "Absolutely insulting!" etc.

"should claim our attention. We all can speak with deep feeling on this branch of the subject, and possibly we may find it necessary to limit discussion of it. Then I would suggest that we group children and dogs!"

Cries of "The pets!" "Darlings!" "Dirty creatures!" "Noisy youngsters!" etc.

"and close with a discussion of flat building gossips, the most troublesome and notorious of their kind."

There was a dead silence as she ceased speaking. The women looked at each other in a bewildered sort of way, and then almost as one person they got up and moved toward the door.

"Personaliites should be barred," said one as she angrily marched out.

"I never was so insulted in all my life," said another.

Particularly Patient.

"Patience, my dear, patience," said Harkins blandly to his wife one morning at the breakfast table when she spoke a trifle sharply to one of the children for dropping his bread, buttered side down, on the cloth. "You know that accidents will happen, and we were children ourselves once. I'm sure that Bertie didn't mean to—great Jupiter! There goes Harold's glass of milk all over my new trousers. If I don't—oh, you'd better skedaddle from the table, young man. It beats everything. Get a cloth, somebody, and clean up this mess. It beats thunder that a man can't sit at his own table without being tormented and bespattered as I am every time I try to eat a meal under my roof. Look at these trousers—absolutely and utterly ruined. Just wait till I get hold of that boy. Just wait till I lay hands on him, and I'll teach him how to deliberately throw a glass of milk over a guinea pair of trousers. Don't tell me that he didn't mean to do it. He came to the table with the intention of doing it, and I—well, you'll see what I'll do when I get hold of him."—Strand Magazine.

An Enemy of Humanity.

There are probably few persons of mature years who have not read the story of the man who put the sick beggar upon his best horse in order to take him to his home and friends. The beggar suddenly recovered his strength and rode off with the horse that was the pride of the desert and the fortune of his owner. The man called after the thief and begged him to halt for a moment. Safe from pursuit, he did so, when his benefactor implored him never to tell how he obtained the horse, as the incident, if known, might stand in the way of relief of some honest beggar who sought charity by the wayside. Although it is claimed that the story is a very old one, it is just as applicable to our time as it was when the affair occurred.

It is the professional beggar who makes the most terrible suffering possible to those who are too proud, too honest or too timid to ask for what they need.—New York Ledger.

A Cemetery Story From Maine.

In a quaint old cemetery at Bass Harbor, Me., lies an aged couple who were noted in their life for their piety and their active interest in meetings and other good works. The old gentleman in his exhortation would often speak of wearing the crown, while the old lady often spoke of blossoming as the rose. After the tombstones had been erected at their graves with their names and ages duly chronicled thereon there appeared on his tombstone distinctly outlined the figure of a crown, while on hers appeared the figure of a full blown rose. The fact is well authenticated by many people who have visited the cemetery on purpose to see this wonderful sight.—Deer Isle Gazette.

All Quiet There.

"I'm glad to know," remarked Miss Cayenne, "that Mr. and Mrs. Jinkies are living far more happily than they were formerly."

"Indeed!"

"Yes, I am informed that they have not spoken to each other for weeks"—London Tit Bits.

The People's Cyclopedias

IS THE ONLY REFERENCE WORK COMPLETE TO DATE.

A MULTITUDE OF QUESTIONS

Assail every man in America. In business his answer must be correct or losses follow. In social communication with his fellows accurate knowledge brings him friendship and respect. At home his duty demands that wide and varied and exact information shall enable him to give the right answer to his children's inquiries. "I DON'T KNOW," is the hardest and most embarrassing sentence to say. If you can say "I don't know, but wait a minute and I will tell you—that's different. If you can turn quickly to a reliable and complete treasury of information, embarrassment gives place to satisfaction.

THE PEOPLE'S CYCLOPEDIA

is ready to answer every question. Go as far back in history as you care to—come right down to 1897—whatever you ask is answered.

The People's Cyclopedias is not "padded." Every subject is completely covered, but is not overburdened with verbosity—it is not obscured by a mass of irrelevant matter. Everything is "short, terse, succinct and to the point." You can turn to what you want in an instant. The index is perfect. Whenever an illustration is needed it is there. Whenever a map will help—it is there—and it is right—right up to date.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:—This is to testify that I have examined The People's Cyclopedias; that its articles are to the point and up to date; that it is the Cyclopedias that each teacher should have in his library. I cheerfully recommend it to the thoughtful and thorough teacher.

J. W. MOORE,

WOMEN AND TOBACCO.

MISS ALICE LOWRY'S NOVEL CRUSADE AGAINST THE WEED.

She Will Form a League of Young Women Pledged to Refuse Matrimonial Offers From Smokers—Discussion of Four Simple Questions on This Topic.

From La Grange, Ind., comes an announcement that has set all the unmarried smokers of America a-tremble. A telegram states that Miss Alice E. Lowry, a young woman of Cass county, Mich., has had a call to devote her life to a crusade against tobacco. She will at once proceed to abolish the evil by forming a league of young women pledged to refuse to marry men addicted to the weed.

From La Grange, Ind., comes an announcement that has set all the unmarried smokers of America a-tremble. A telegram states that Miss Alice E. Lowry, a young woman of Cass county, Mich., has had a call to devote her life to a crusade against tobacco. She will at once proceed to abolish the evil by forming a league of young women pledged to refuse to marry men addicted to the weed.

But even the average smoker, all a-tremble as he is, would like to ask Miss Lowry these four simple little questions:

1. Is the use of tobacco an evil? 2. Granted that it is an evil that should be suppressed, can it be suppressed? 3. Granted that it can be suppressed, is woman willing to refuse to marry in the attempt to suppress it? 4. Granted that woman is willing, would her refusal be avail?

To discuss the first question is thrashing over old straw. In the good old Puritan days men were fined for making a chimney of their nostrils. Doubtless as late as two generations ago there were people who considered smoking not only a vice, but a sin. Apparently the present generation does not even consider it a vice. At any rate, 4,375,718,000 cigars were smoked in America in 1896, an increase of 300,000,000 over 1895. At this rate of progress, apparently, a generation hence the use of tobacco will be considered a virtue, even if it is not made obligatory on every male citizen.

The second question can hardly be answered until the experiment is tried, but it would seem that if Miss Lowry's league cannot suppress it no other human agency can.

When we take up the third query, we strike a number of questions in one. The political economist will take one view, the sentimental another and the scoffer a third. And they will all be against Miss Lowry. The first will ask: What is the chief end of woman if not to marry? If a woman loves a smoker and the smoker loves her, is she not doing herself and him and the state more harm by refusing to marry him than she would by countenancing his use of tobacco? Miss Lowry will doubtless maintain that no member of her league will allow herself to fall in love with a smoker. But, chimes in the sentimental, the little god is no respecter of persons and draws his bow on whom he wills, and when a woman feels the smart of his arrow in her bosom she will go through fire and water, not to say tobacco smoke, when the man of her choice bids her come. The conclusion that stares us in the face, therefore, is that the young woman from Michigan must get Cupid to sign an ironclad contract not to shoot members of her league or the crusade is lost ere it is well begun.

The scoffer will attack Miss Lowry on this third question in a tender spot. He will say that she has forgotten that woman is eternally bent on marrying man to reform him. Is there a fascinating drunkard? Some woman, usually fifty times too good for him, is always at hand to undertake the job of making a sober man of him through marriage. Was there ever a man so well off as gaging ways who went unmated because woman despaired of making a new man of him? Why, so addicted is woman to this habit that she will even marry a man who will not reform to win her. She eternally forgets the sad truth that a man who will not mend his ways for her as a maid will not mend them for her as a wife. Hence the logical conclusion seems to be that Miss Lowry must put a high board fence around her leaguers or they will immediately proceed to fall in love with the very first smokers they see and marry them to reform them.

And, worst of all, this mischievous third query suggests the flat footed question. Does woman consider the use of tobacco an evil? Current report has it that woman herself is beginning to show a decided fondness for the weed in the form of the insidious cigarette. Be this as it may, does woman look on the habitual smoker with disfavor either before or after marriage? Is not the wife who objects to her husband smoking at home so rare as to cause wondering comment: Has not experience taught woman that the man who enjoys his cigar or his pipe is more companionable than the man who detests tobacco or regards its use a vice if not sin? The wise woman does not expect perfection in a husband. Is it not possible that she has come to the conclusion that smoking is perhaps the least objectionable of the small vices to which the average man is heir, and that if he does not smoke he is apt to indulge in something more serious?

Of course question four cannot be debated with any great degree of seriousness. The scoffer will say at once that man is already showing an increasing tendency to look with favor upon the joys of single blessedness and that the demands of the league will not, to say the least, add to his willingness to assume the bonds of matrimony.

Therefore the average man, having examined Miss Lowry's proposition with a calmly dispassionate eye and considered the subject in all its many aspects, is apt to conclude that it is not the straightforward crusade that it pretends to be, but is some sort of a scheme in disguise. Whether it is a plan to marry off the surplus women or to increase the ranks of bachelorhood or to boom the sale of tobacco time alone will tell.—John D. Sherman in Chicago Times-Herald.

The second question can hardly be answered until the experiment is tried, but it would seem that if Miss Lowry's league cannot suppress it no other human agency can.

When we take up the third query, we strike a number of questions in one. The political economist will take one view, the sentimental another and the scoffer a third. Mrs. Nack May Get 20 Years.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—It is understood Mrs. Nack will be arraigned in court next week when her counsel, Emanuel Friend, will in her behalf enter a plea of guilty of manslaughter in the first degree for her part in the killing of Gulzenuppe and that the district attorney will accept the plea. In doing this Mr. Youngs would be recognizing Mrs. Nack's action in turning state's evidence at the first trial. Mrs. Nack may be sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment.

Yet the story is true, every word of it, and even while it is being told the condition really exists.

It is a family and one boarder. The husband and father is absent from the city, a part of his life's program, he will readily assure you, he had no part in making. When he went away he left a wife, one grown daughter and two sons bordering on manhood who had no alternative but to get along as best they could without the influence of his none too carefully trained hand. They decided their family was not large enough, and a boarder was added to the number.

And that is how they live, all of them in one room. There they sleep and eat and live at least some portion of their time. There are many features connected with the arrangement that are disgusting in the extreme; there are others that are sad enough to make the heart of the average human being go out in pity. That this thing can be in an enlightened community, filled with at least its share of churches, schools and church-going people, is one of the things at present unexplainable.

The owner of the property has only recently learned of the matter, and is doing all he can to rid himself of his troublesome tenants, believing that an empty room without rent is more to be desired than the same apartment when it contains such a large population.

THIS SPEAKS VOLUMES.

Warm Words of Commendation of Dr. Wood's Skill.

CONNEAUT, OHIO, NOV. 26, 1897.
Dr. WOOD, DEAR SIR—I wrote you a letter a week ago. Sent it to Niagara Falls; received no answer, so will send this to Cleveland. Have been feeling quiet well; am gaining fast. Gained ten pounds since I began taking treatment from you, October 11. Am out of medicine. Will you send me, or shall I wait until you come to Conneaut again? If you receive this letter, please answer, and oblige.

Respectfully Yours,
MISS EVELYN GREEN.

The Theater.

Hubert Labadie's company will appear in "Faust" at the Grand tomorrow evening, and a splendid production is expected. The company is first class, and the electrical effects are wonderful.

"Hot Time" comes to the Grand Saturday night with one of the brightest and best performances of the season.

Aldora Shem's presentation of "The Bells" next Monday evening is eagerly awaited by the young tragedian's many admirers in this city. The piece is a startling one, and well worthy the admiration it has been granted.

On the River.

The Ohio has fallen but three inches since yesterday, and the marks today show 9.11 feet in the channel.

The Queen City passed down last night with an immense load of freight and a large passenger list.

The Ben Hur is the only packet up to-day and the Bedford is due down to-morrow night.

The Defender went up this morning with a heavy tow, and the Tom Dods-worth went up last night with the largest tow of empties ever sent up the river. Business brisk at this port.

Moved to Toronto.

John Smalley and Harry Clutters, of Wellsville, John O'Hanlon, of East Liverpool, moved their families to our city yesterday.

Mr. Clutters said the freight traffic was so great that he could not get his goods shipped until late last evening.—Toronto Tribune.

Good News For People of East Liverpool.
At the urgent request of the people of East Liverpool the U-No Tonic company has decided to remain a short while longer to enable all to get U-No remedies at same old prices.

Bright and Spicy—the NEWS REVIEW

Kather Personal.

"Ladies," said the chairman of the meeting of the Woman's Advanced Thought and Practical Experience club, "this meeting, I believe, was announced to be a symposium on the subject of 'Apartment House Nuisances.'"

There was a murmur of assent and approval, and from the way every woman in the hall straightened up it was evident that there wasn't one of them who didn't feel that she had something of importance to say on the subject.

"I hope," continued the chairman, "that we will be able to get through this afternoon, but it is unquestionably a most comprehensive subject, and, with your permission, I will undertake to divide it so that we can take up one feature at a time."

"So lovely!" "Just the thing!" and "How nice!" came from various parts of the hall.

"I would suggest that we first take up the landlord, as he!"

Cries of "Mean thing!" "Promised us a porcelain bathtub a year ago!" "Won't paper the hall!" etc.

"is one of the greatest of flat building evils. After disposing of him, I think perhaps the janitor!"

Cries of "Disobliging creature!" "Freezes us to death!" "Absolutely insulting!" etc.

"should claim our attention. We all can speak with deep feeling on this branch of the subject, and possibly we may find it necessary to limit discussion of it. Then I would suggest that we group children and dogs!"

Cries of "The pets!" "Darlings!" "Dirty creatures!" "Noisy youngsters!" etc.

"and close with a discussion of flat building gossips, the most troublesome and notorious of their kind."

There was a dead silence as she ceased speaking. The women looked at each other in a bewildered sort of way, and then almost as one person they got up and moved toward the door.

"Personalities should be barred," said one as she angrily marched out.

"I never was so insulted in all my life," said another.

Particularly Patient.

"Patience, my dear, patience," said Harkins blandly to his wife one morning at the breakfast table when she spoke a trifle sharply to one of the children for dropping his bread, buttered side down, on the cloth. "You know that accidents will happen, and we were children ourselves once. I'm sure that Bertie didn't mean to—great Jupiter! There goes Harold's glass of milk all over my new trousers. If I don't—oh, you'd better skedaddle from the table, young man. It beats everything. Get a cloth, somebody, and clean up this mess. It beats thunder that a man can't sit at his own table without being tormented and bespattered as I am every time I try to eat a meal under my roof. Look at these trousers—absolutely and utterly ruined. Just wait till I get hold of that boy. Just wait till I lay hands on him, and I'll teach him how to deliberately throw a glass of milk over a guinea pair of trousers. Don't tell me that he didn't mean to do it. He came to the table with the intention of doing it, and I—I—well, you'll see what I'll do when I get hold of him!"—Strand Magazine.

An Enemy of Humanity.

There are probably few persons of mature years who have not read the story of the man who put the sick beggar upon his best horse in order to take him to his home and friends. The beggar suddenly recovered his strength and rode off with the horse that was the pride of the desert and the fortune of his owner. The man called after the thief and begged him to halt for a moment. Safe from pursuit, he did so, when his benefactor implored him never to tell how he obtained the horse, as the incident, if known, might stand in the way of relief of some honest beggar who sought charity by the wayside. Although it is claimed that the story is a very old one, it is just as applicable to our time as it was when the affair occurred.

It is the professional beggar who makes the most terrible suffering possible to those who are too proud, too honest or too timid to ask for what they need.—New York Ledger.

A Cemetery Story From Maine.

In a quaint old cemetery at Bass Harbor, Me., lies an aged couple who were noted in their life for their piety and their active interest in meetings and other good works. The old gentleman in his exhortation would often speak of wearing the crown, while the old lady often spoke of blossoming as the rose. After the tombstones had been erected at their graves with their names and ages duly chronicled thereon there appeared on his tombstone distinctly outlined the figure of a crown, while on hers appeared the figure of a full blown rose. The fact is well authenticated by many people who have visited the cemetery on purpose to see this wonderful sight.—Deer Isle Gazette.

All Quiet There.

"I'm glad to know," remarked Miss Cayenne, "that Mr. and Mrs. Jinkles are living far more happily than they were formerly."

"Indeed."

"Yes I am informed that they have not spoken to each other for weeks"—London Tit Bits.

The People's Cyclopedias

IS THE ONLY REFERENCE WORK COMPLETE TO DATE.

A MULTITUDE OF QUESTIONS

Assail every man in America. In business his answer must be correct or losses follow. In social communication with his fellows accurate knowledge brings him friendship and respect. At home his duty demands that wide and varied and exact information shall enable him to give the right answer to his children's inquiries. "I DON'T KNOW," is the hardest and most embarrassing sentence to say. If you can say "I don't know, but wait a minute and I will tell you—that's different. If you can turn quickly to a reliable and complete treasury of information, embarrassment gives place to satisfaction.

THE PEOPLE'S CYCLOPEDIA

is ready to answer every question. Go as far back in history as you care to—come right down to 1897—whatever you ask is answered.

The People's Cyclopedias is not "padded." Every subject is completely covered, but is not overburdened with verbosity—it is not obscured by a mass of irrelevant matter. Everything is "short, terse, succinct and to the point." You can turn to what you want in an instant. The index is perfect. Whenever an illustration is needed it is there. Whenever a map will help—it is there—and it is right—right up to date.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:—This is to testify that I have examined The People's Cyclopedias; that its articles are to the point and up to date; that it is the Cyclopedias that each teacher should have in his library. I cheerfully recommend it to the thoughtful and thorough teacher.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 15, 1897.—I have a set of the People's Cyclopedias, published by Eaton & Mains, which I consult often, and always with satisfaction. I find it up to date, and in many things more accurate than other cyclopedias. The price is as low as can be made on a finely bound and beautifully illustrated work. The People's Cyclopedias has the finest set of maps I ever saw. I cheerfully recommend it.

WOMEN AND TOBACCO.

MISS ALICE LOWRY'S NOVEL CRUSADE AGAINST THE WEED.

She Will Form a League of Young Women Pledged to Refuse Matrimonial Offers From Smokers—Discussion of Four Simple Questions on This Topic.

From La Grange, Ind., comes an announcement that has set all the unmarried smokers of America a-tremble. A telegram states that Miss Alice E. Lowry, a young woman of Cass county, Mich., has had a call to devote her life to a crusade against tobacco. She will at once proceed to abolish the evil by forming a league of young women pledged to refuse to marry men addicted to the weed.

But even the average smoker, all a-tremble as he is, would like to ask Miss Lowry these four simple little questions:

1. Is the use of tobacco an evil? 2. Granted that it is an evil that should be suppressed, can it be suppressed? 3. Granted that it can be suppressed, is woman willing to refuse to marry in the attempt to suppress it? 4. Granted that woman is willing, would her refusal be available?

To discuss the first question is thrashing over old straw. In the good old Puritan days men were fined for making a chimney of their nostrils. Doubtless as late as two generations ago there were people who considered smoking not only a vice, but a sin. Apparently the present generation does not even consider it a vice. At any rate, 4,375,718,000 cigars were smoked in America in 1896, an increase of 300,000,000 over 1895. At this rate of progress, apparently, a generation hence the use of tobacco will be considered a virtue, even if it is not made obligatory on every male citizen.

The second question can hardly be answered until the experiment is tried, but it would seem that if Miss Lowry's league cannot suppress it no other human agency can.

When we take up the third query, we strike a number of questions in one. The political economist will take one view, the sentimental another and the scoffer a third. And they will all ask: What is the chief end of woman if not to marry? If a woman loves a smoker and the smoker loves her, is she not doing herself and him and the state more harm by refusing to marry him than she would by countenancing his use of tobacco? Miss Lowry will doubtless maintain that no member of her league will allow herself to fall in love with a smoker. But, chimes in the sentimental, the little god is no respecter of persons and draws his bow on whom he wills, and when a woman feels the smart of his arrow in her bosom she will go through fire and water, not to say tobacco smoke, when the man of her choice bids her come. The conclusion that stares us in the face, therefore, is that the young woman from Michigan must get Cupid to sign an ironclad contract not to shoot members of her league or the crusade is lost ere it is well begun.

The scoffer will attack Miss Lowry on this third question in a tender spot. He will say that she has forgotten that woman is eternally bent on marrying man to reform him. Is there a fascinating drunkard? Some woman, usually fifty times too good for him, is always at hand to undertake the job of making a sober man of him through marriage. Was there ever a better do well of ex-gaging ways who went unmated because woman despaired of making a new man of him? Why, so addicted is woman to this habit that she will even marry a man who will not reform to win her. She eternally forgets the sad truth that a man who will not mend his ways for her as a maid will not mend them for her as a wife. Hence the logical conclusion seems to be that Miss Lowry must put a high board fence around her leaguers or they will immediately proceed to fall in love with the very first smokers they see and marry them to reform them.

And, worst of all, this mischievous third query suggests the flat footed question. Does woman consider the use of tobacco an evil? Current report has it that woman herself is beginning to show a decided fondness for the weed in the form of the insidious cigarette. Be this as it may, does woman look on the habitual smoker with disfavor either before or after marriage? Is not the wife who objects to her husband smoking at home so rare as to cause wondering comment? Has not experience taught woman that the man who enjoys his cigar or his pipe is more companionable than the man who detests tobacco or regards its use a vice if not a sin? The wise woman does not expect perfection in a husband. Is it not possible that she has come to the conclusion that smoking is perhaps the least objectionable of the small vices to which the average man is heir, and that if he does not smoke he is apt to indulge in something more serious?

Of course question four cannot be debated with any great degree of seriousness. The scoffer will say at once that man is already showing an increasing tendency to look with favor upon the joys of single blessedness and that the demands of the league will not, to say the least, add to his willingness to assume the bonds of matrimony. Therefore the average man, having examined Miss Lowry's proposition with a calmly dispassionate eye and considered the subject in all its many aspects, is apt to conclude that it is not the straightforward crusade that it pretends to be, but is some sort of a scheme in disguise. Whether it is a plan to marry off the surplus women or to increase the ranks of bachelorhood or to provide all smokers with wives or to provide the sale of tobacco time alone will tell.—John D. Sherman in Chicago Times-Herald.

THE PRESIDENT'S ATTITUDE

Will Attend a Church Less, Where Minister Attacked Catholics.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The report that the president would withdraw from the Metropolitan Methodist church on account of the sermon preached by its pastor on Thanksgiving day is denied. It is probable, however, that the president will be seen less frequently at that church and will attend services more often elsewhere.

The preacher made an attack on the Catholic church in his sermon.

United States demands Satisfaction.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 2.—The United States minister to Turkey, James B. Angell, has renewed the demand of the United States for an indemnity from the Turkish government for the pillage of the American missions at Kharput, Marash and Haskong, Armenia. The port denies any responsibility.

Banker Spalding Sentenced.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Charles Warren Spalding, ex-president of the Globe Savings bank, has been sentenced to an indeterminate term in the penitentiary. He was charged with embezzling funds of the nine cities of Illinois, of which he was treasurer.

Mrs. Nack May Get 20 Years.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—It is understood Mrs. Nack will be arraigned in court next week when her counsel, Emanuel Friend, will in her behalf enter a plea of guilty of manslaughter in the first degree for her part in the killing of Gulbenkian and that the district attorney will accept the plea. In doing this Mr. Youngs would be recognizing Mrs. Nack's action in turning state's evidence at the first trial. Mrs. Nack may be sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment.

Satisfied of Dreyfus' Guilt.

PARIS, Dec. 2.—It is understood that the report of General Pelleux, who was appointed by the military governor of Paris, General Saussier, to investigate the charges brought against Esteban Dreyfus, states that he is satisfied with the guilt of Dreyfus.
